GERMANY EAGER FOR PEACE

Chancellor Declares That as the Allies Spurned Overtures "We Must Win a Decisive Victory"

By International News Service.

Berlin (via Sayville, L. I. Wireless), June 16.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor addressed the Reichstag this afternoon on the question of peace, declaring that Germany's position had never been so strong since the war began. The chancellor's speech came unexpectedly during the third reading of the budget.

"Six months ago I first spoke of our readiness for peace," said Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, "basing my remarks upon the military situation as it existed then. I could do this, confident that the situation created by the war would develop still further to our advantage.

"Events have justified this confidence. We have made further progress, and we are now stronger on all fronts than ever before."

The chancellor declared that Germany would neglect nothing which might shorten the war.

"If I should say we are now ready for peace, despite the strength of our position, there would be no reason to regret the words, although our offer previously made had no success with our enemies," said Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg.

"SUCCESSFUL DEFENCE."

"During the critical days in July, 1914, every statesman had the duty before God, before his country and before his own conscience to preserve an honorable peace.

"In the same fashion, we, after a successful defence, will neglect nothing which might shorten the terrible sufferings in the European conflagration."

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg recalled an interview he had given to American journalists recently in which he declared that peace negotiations could only be undertaken by responsible statesmen of belligerent countries and

Narrow Gauge Train Enters Lynn Factory

A dozen employes of the Louis Winslow Leather Company, Market street, Lynn, jumped for their lives early today when a train of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad took possession of the factory.

The factory is situated next door to the Narrow Gauge depot and the train, in charge of Engineer Alley, was backing into the station, preparatory to a trip to Boston, when the brakes refused to hold the train on a slippery rail and the four cars went right through the wall.

Nearly every window in the factory was broken by the force of the crash and both buildings were badly damaged, but no one was hurt.

SANITY HEARING FOR WAITE PLANNED

Sing Sing, N. Y., June 16.—Reports in Sing Sing are to the effect that an effort will be made soon to have Governor Whitman appoint a sanity commission to examine Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, under sentence of death for the poisoning of his father-in-law.

Waite's actions grow more strange every day. Besides writing letters, all personally censored by Warden Kirchwey, he talks constantly of his crime to other prisoners of the death cells. He chats incoherently at times, and frequently stares blankly at guards when they address him. It is said at least one prison official will indorse the application for a hearing of Waite before a sanity commission.

'ROOSEVELT' SHAKE A DEADLY DRINK

St. Louis, Mo., June 16.—Not having much else to do at the convention, some of the politicians who belong to the Forty-second Street Country Club and the now defunct Hoffman House Brigade, have devised some new drinks. They are the Marshall bracer, the Hughes cocktail, the Fairbanks cocktail and the Roosevelt shake. The Roosevelt drink is the most dangerous of all—brandy, white mint, absinthe and anything else the bartender happens to have handy, provided it's deadly.

He is thirty-two years old and married. He was appointed in 1907 and during that year became a member of the Boston Bar Association. The position pays about $4,000 a year.

EXPERT IS DEFENCE'S TARGET

Counsel for Student Questions Toxicologist on the Manner of Lambert Girl's Death in Woods

By International News Service.

Waukegan, Ill., June 16.—The poison splashes on Marian Lambert's green coat still hold Will Orpet's fate. Hour by hour the attorneys for the defence strove vainly to discredit them, to rub them aside, to belittle them. But the sinister triology of poison blotches maintained their baleful influence.

With Ralph H. Webster, the Chicago toxicologist, back on the stand for cross-examination Attorney Ralph H. Potter, for the defence, drove straight at the heart of the theory of the prosecution that it was a liquid and not a powdered poison that killed the schoolgirl.

The first onslaught was a cunning one. Dr. Webster was forced to admit that he had never heard of the spots on the green coat until the night of May 4, the day before he received the coat and began his analysis of the spots upon it.

The defence claims that the coat lay from February until May in the possession of the Lake Forest authorities without any discovery being made of the poison spots. Dr. Webster was next forced to admit that his whole theory of the liquid solution was built up on the poisoned cloak. These thrusts were regarded as distinct advances for the defence.

Out of the redirect examination of Dr. Webster there leaped one momentary thrill. For an instant it seemed that through his own handkerchief Orpet was to be linked securely to the crime of Helm's woods.

A hint of the examination of a sweater and pair of trousers and a handkerchief belonging to the accused had come out of the cross-examination. Dr. Webster had stated that he had found syrup spots on the clothing and spots of blood on the handkerchief.

QUESTION EXPERT.

"What else did you find on the handkerchief besides blood?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Joslyn, during his redirect questioning.

"For a time I thought that I had found traces of cyanide of potassium," said the poison expert blandly.

The courtroom hummed. The attorneys for the defence were on their

GOW QUITS LICENSE BOARD

Writes Caustic Letter to Governor McCall for His Failure to Reappoint Commissioner Woods

Charles R. Gow, chairman of the Boston Licensing Board, today submitted his resignation to Governor McCall to take effect as soon as his successor is appointed and qualifies.

Governor McCall declined to make any comment on the resignation.

Mr. Gow was an appointee of Governor Walsh, and his term expired in 1920. Fletcher Ranney, recently named to succeed Robert A. Woods on the commission, was named by the governor as chairman in place of Mr. Gow.

Mr. Gow's letter to the Governor is as follows:

I herewith tender you my resignation as a member of the Licensing Board for the city of Boston, to take effect upon the qualification of my successor, who, I trust, will be designated by you at your earliest reasonable convenience.

In explanation of this action I desire to state that my appointment to this office, about one year and a half ago, was neither sought nor desired by me, and had I then been familiar with the disagreeable nature of the responsibilities entailed it would unquestionably have been declined.

My official duties as a member and chairman of this board have proved to be a serious handicap to my personal business affairs, and I would long ago have laid down their burdens, but for a sense of duty to the public and of respect for the Governor who honored me with the appointment.

Without intending to reflect in any way upon the qualifications or fitness of his successor, I feel constrained to assume that your failure to reappoint Mr. Woods, whose term has recently expired, must be accepted as evidence that you disapprove of the principles which he typifies in the present board, viz.: independence of thought and action regardless of personal consequences based upon what he believes to be the right, rather than what he deems to be expedient.

As I also am in hearty accord with this attitude, and would continue so to act, were I to remain a member of the board, I am convinced that my further presence must prove an embarrassment to any contemplated change of policy in the board's affairs.

In view of all the circumstances I feel that I am now relieved from any obligations, which I owe to any one, longer to continue in the exercise of an official function, which not only is extremely distasteful to me, but is also a source of serious personal financial loss.

I shall be glad to render such aid as is desired, to my successor in office, and my knowledge and experience in the board's affairs will always be available if at any time required.

PLATFORM FIGHT ON 'VOTES'

Dissenters on Suffrage Plank Carry Battle on This Issue to the Floor of the Convention

By E. R. T. SARTWELL,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 16.—"Americanism—the indivisibility and coherent strength of the nation"—was proclaimed the supreme issue of this day by the platform today submitted to the Democratic National Convention as a declaration of party faith.

Military and naval preparedness to "Assist and demonstrate" this Americanism and a violent denunciation of "Conspirators for the advancement of the interest of a foreign power" marked the strong planks of the platform.

A weary all night session of the resolutions committee of the convention that was a tumult of discussion that at times became acrid wrote the platform. But the committee was dominated and controlled over the long light strand of a telephone wire that stretched from the committee room to the White House.

Every plank agreed to was read to President Wilson, the candidate of the party, who sat at the telephone through the long night. When the platform was completed it had the unqualified endorsement of the President.

DIVIDE ON SUFFRAGE.

Woman suffrage, which roused the committee to a violent disagreement, was written into the platform in a plank that was objectionable to both supporters and opponents of votes for women.

It declared in favor of the enfranchisement of women "by the States." Both sides promised to air the controversy before the convention and Committeeman Ferguson of Texas, Nugent of New Jersey, and Bartlett of Georgia, prepared a minority report to the convention, opposing any suffrage declaration.

The minority report was signed by five members and read as follows: "We, a minority of the committee on

Lomasney Fights for "Free Ireland" Plank

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

St. Louis, Mo., June 16.—A fight for the recognition of Ireland as a free and independent nation will be made from the floor of the Democratic national convention today by Martin M. Lomasney of Boston.

Lomasney has prepared a resolution calling for a congress of the nations at the close of the European war and urging that Ireland be allowed to sit in the congress as a separate nation.

He sought to present his resolution to the committee on resolutions this morning, but as the committee failed to sit Lomasney informs the AMERICAN he will introduce it from the convention floor before the session adjourns today.

Chairman Ollie James has just agreed to recognize Lomasney. The Ward 8 leader expects to be supported by those Democrats affiliated with the Friends of Irish Freedom.

RICH AUTOIST APPEALS JAIL SENTENCE

Taunton, June 16.—Herbert H. Shumway, Jr., of Spring street, son of a wealth manufacturer of this city, was today sentenced by Judge Austin to one year in the House of Correction for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

A year ago Shumway, who is twenty-eight years old, was fined for a similar offence.

Shumway was arrested by Patrolman Stanton while driving a touring car in which were his brother Walter and the latter's wife. According to the policeman, the driver was zigzagging across the street and up on to the sidewalk, while his brother and sister-in-law were attempting to get him to drive home.

He appealed from the sentence and was held in $500.

REVERE BEACH BATHHOUSE OPEN

A man is a hero when he goes to war, but John Lysaght, a Bay State Railway conductor, was the first man to pass through the turnstiles after the opening of the State Bathhouse at Revere Beach at 10 o'clock today.

After donning his bathing suit, Lysaght, who lives at No. 2 Pratt street, Revere, raced down the beach, in a biting east wind, and dived into the breakers. He came up with a smile, for the water was lukewarm, with a temperature of 70 degrees.

During the day two more hardy men braved the cold, giving Manager August Vatter and his large corps of attendants something to do. The well-known gentler sex, however, was conspicuous by its absence.

RUSH T. R. TO DOCTOR TODAY

Former President Has Bad Night at New York Hotel; Mrs. Roosevelt Much Worried

By International News Service.

New York, June 16.—The condition of Colonel Roosevelt was considerably worse today. He had a bad night, coughing a great deal, and this morning could hardly speak above a whisper.

The colonel spent the night at the Hotel Langdon, where he has been since he was taken ill several days ago. Early this morning Mrs. Roosevelt notified the hotel authorities that the colonel was too ill to see any one and that no one was allowed to go to his apartment.

Then she called Dr. Hubert V. Guile. He reached the hotel in thirty minutes and went to the colonel's room. Shortly afterward he came down with the colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt. The colonel walked between the two and looked thoroughly ill.

"Boys, I have nothing to say," he said to the waiting newspaper men as he saw them near the elevator.

"How do you feel?" someone asked him. The Colonel merely waved his hand.

At the door of the hotel the doctor's automobile was waiting. The three got into the car. As the Colonel sat down he pressed his hand to his left side as if in pain and kept it there while they drove away.

They went to Dr. Guile's office where a thorough examination was made.

CALL ON PATRIOTS TO STAMP OUT CURSE OF DIVIDED FEALTY

St. Louis, June 16.—The Democratic platform as reported by the committee on resolutions after an all night session which was characterized by bitter contests over the suffrage, Mexican and Americanism planks, is in part as follows:

"We endorse the administration of Woodrow Wilson. It speaks for itself, it is the best exposition of sound Democratic policy at home and abroad.

"We found our country hampered by special privileges, a high tariff, inelastic banking laws and an inelastic currency. Our foreign affairs were dominated by powerful interests for their selfish ends.

"The Republican party, despite repeated pledges, was impotent to correct wrongs which it has fostered. Under our party's constructive leadership which has been entrusted to the people these abuses have been corrected and our people freed from imperialism.

"The archaic banking and currency system, product of panic and stringency under Republican administration, long the refuge of the Money Trust, has been supplanted by the federal reserve act, a true democracy of credit under government control, already recognized a financial bulwark in a world crisis, mobilizing our resources, placing abundant credit at the disposal of legitimate industry and making a currency panic impossible.

RELIEF FOR FARMERS.

"We have created a federal trade commission to accommodate the perplexing questions arising under the anti-trust laws so that monopoly may be strangled at its birth and legitimate industry encouraged. Fair competition in business is now assured.

"We have effected an adjustment of the tariff, adequate for revenue under peace conditions, and fair to the consumer and to the producer.

"We have adjusted the burdens of taxation so that wealthier incomes bear their equitable share.

"We have lifted human labor from the category of commodities and have secured to the workingman the right of voluntary association for his protection and welfare.

"We have protected the rights of the laborer against the unwarranted issuance of writs of injunction and have guaranteed to him the right of trial by jury in cases of alleged contempt committed outside of the presence of the court.

"After considering the Underwood tariff law and the democratic theory and doctrine of tariff for revenue only and the principle of a non-partisan tariff board for such changes and amendments as may be necessary, the Democratic party pledges the name of 'Americanism' as follows:

PATRIOTISM THE ISSUE.

"The part that the United States will play in the world of international relationship which is now upon us will depend upon our preparation and our conception of duty. We clearly therefore recognize the assertion and triumphant demonstration of the ability and the efficient strength of the nation as the supreme issue of the hour if we are to secure lasting peace and justice. We whole heartedly favor the crisis of manifold character.

"It summons all men, of whatever origin or creed, who would count themselves Americans to join in making clear to all the world the unity and consequent power of America. This is no issue of patriotism. To taint it with partisanship would be to defile it.

"In this day of test, America must show itself, not a nation of partisans, but a nation of patriots.

"Those gathered here in America, the best of the blood, the industry and the genius of the whole world, the elements of a great race and a magnificent society to be unified into a mighty and splendid nation.

"Whoever, actuated by the purpose to promote the interest of a foreign power in disregard of our own country's welfare or to injure this government in its foreign relations or cripple or destroy its industrials at home, and whoever by arousing prejudices of a racial, religious or other nature creates discord and strife among our people so as to obstruct the whole process of unification, is faithless to the trust which the privilege of our citizenship repose in him, and is disloyal to this country.

"We, therefore, condemn as subversive of this nation's duty and integrity and as destructive of its welfare the activities and designs of every group or organization, political or otherwise, that has for its object the advancement of the interest of a foreign power, whether such object is promoted by intimidating the government, a political party or representatives of the people, or which is accomplished by sowing seeds of racial and creed hate to divide our people into antagonistic groups and which tends to destroy that complete agreement and solidarity of the people and that unity of sentiment and national purpose necessary to the perpetuity of the nation and its free institutions.

"We condemn any political party which, in view of the activity of such conspirators, surrenders its integrity or modifies its policy."

PREPAREDNESS.

On the subject of preparedness the platform says:

"We favor the maintenance of an army fully adequate to the requirements of order, of safety and of the protection of the nation's rights, to the fullest development of modern methods of warfare, and we favor the maintenance of an adequate reserve of citizens trained to arms and prepared to serve in the protection of the integrity of the United States against any danger which, in the future, may unexpectedly arise, and a fixed policy for the continuous development of a navy adequate for the national needs and conditions of this nation and fully equal to the international duties which the United States now hopes and expects to take a part in performing.

NEUTRALITY.

On international relations the platform says:

"The circumstances of the last two years have revealed necessities of international action of which a former generation can have foreseen. We hold that it is the duty of the United States to use its power not only to make itself respected at home, but to command respect throughout the world, and both for this end and in the interests of humanity to stand for the rights of securing settled peace and justice. We whole heartedly favor the crisis of manifold character.

Irvin Cobb Discovers a Few Republicans Are Left in the Democratic Mecca

By IRVIN S. COBB,
Copyright, 1916, by the Central Press Association.

St. Louis, June 16.—There are Republicans in St. Louis today, not a few of them, and, what is more, plenty of them. Shortly before I began the task of composing these lines, one was pointed out to me on the street. A gentleman who has lived here for years directed my attention to him.

"Believe it or not, as you please," he said, pointing his finger at the other, "but that man yonder is a Republican. I know him well and can substantiate what I am telling you. He not only votes the Republican ticket but he is an open and avowed member of the Republican party."

My eyes ruefully followed this man's finger pointing. He was of middle height, weighing, I should say, about 160 pounds, and was fairly well but expensively attired. He wore a moustache, iron gray in color.

RUMORS OF OTHERS.

His companion was florid, and I think he walked with a slight limp. Otherwise there was nothing about him to distinguish him from ordinary humanity, wondered where he had been hiding all week.

The other Republicans, one white and the other colored, were reported to have been sighted in the street immediately behind my hotel, but as I say, myself see them I do not vouch for the truth or falsity of the story. It may be but idle rumor.

It is a remarkable fact, and one therefore worthy, I think, to be contained in the table of news items, that the United States as a whole and expects to take a part in performing.

TO DRAW CITY HALL PLANS FOR MEDFORD

Mayor Benjamin F. Haines of Medford has appointed Elmer Smith Bailey of No. 53 Cornhill, Boston, as architect to prepare plans for the erection of the new City Hall at a cost of $250,000. The special building commission, it is believed, will select the site of the present City Hall for the new structure, taking in addition to the present lot the property adjoining on the west and on the south as far as the Mystic River. This will also permit the widening of the square at the junction of Main and High streets.

Wilson Is Named by Acclamation

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.
Staff Correspondent International News Service.

St. Louis, June 16.—At six minutes before midnight, Woodrow Wilson was renominated for President by the Democratic convention. The nomination was made by acclamation.

Four minutes later, Thomas Riley Marshall was renominated in the same manner for Vice-President.

The nomination of Wilson was not quite unanimous. Robert Emmet Burke of Illinois voted "No," when at 11:54 Senator Hughes of New Jersey moved to nominate the President by acclamation. When Burke, who came to St. Louis for the express purpose of voting against Wilson, had uttered his "No," Chairman James thundered:

I declare Woodrow Wilson the nominee of this convention by a vote of 1,092 to 1!

President Wilson listened to the demonstration that followed his nomination, at the end of a telephone wire that led into the speaker's stand. A megaphone was attached to the receiver in the Coliseum. Fred G. Lynch of Minnesota notified him at the instant of his nomination.

CHEER FOR 45 MINUTES.

A demonstration lasting forty-five minutes followed the placing of Wilson's name before the convention by Judge Westcott of New Jersey. The same purist made the nominating speech at Baltimore four years ago.

Many brief seconding speeches were made from States considered doubtful in the coming campaign.

Judson Harmon, who opposed the President at Baltimore as a rival candidate, made a seconding speech. There was no opposition to Marshall. All the several aspirants for the honor withdrew, including Roger Sullivan of Chicago and Governor Major of Missouri.

BRYAN STIRS DELEGATES.

William Jennings Bryan stirred the delegates at the beginning of the session by a rousing repetition of his "peerless" lecture, with special reference to Wilson.

All the speakers of the session, which followed the clock around the corner of midnight, resounded the "Wilson has kept us out of war" keynote sounded by Glynn.

The delegates, many of them contestees, sweltered in a stifling atmosphere, as they listened to a Niagara of oratory.

Not only was the hall crowded to the very limit, but thousands gathered outside, listening to the resounding echoes from silver tongues wagging within.

Bay State Men Caught in Mob

By JOHN T. LAMBERT,
Political Editor Boston American.

St. Louis, June 16.—Three Massachusetts delegates to the Democratic National Convention were rescued by St. Louis police with drawn clubs from the very vortex of the angry crowd that stormed the entrance to the Coliseum.

For nearly an hour the Massachusetts delegates, helpless to extricate themselves from the riotous mob, were denied admission to the convention hall.

Senator Ollie James of Kentucky, the permanent chairman of the convention, hearing of their plight, ordered the squad of police in the hall to reinforce the big squad of patrolmen and mounted officers that were attempting valiantly but ineffectually to disperse the crowds.

Patrolmen charged with their clubs. The mounted police urged their mounts through the crowd until they finally reached the hemmed-in Democrats from Massachusetts.

Under escort of the police the Massachusetts delegation was taken to a temporary police station at the rear of the building and admitted to the hall by a heavily-guarded entrance.

Although a national committeeman, Dr. John W. Coughlin was forced to ask police assistance before he could gain admission to his seat. William Jennings Bryan, who was literally dragged through the crowd by policemen early in the night, had nearly completed his speech before the Massachusetts delegates gained entrances to their places.

Local politicians were said to be responsible for the angry crowd. They issued several thousand more tickets than the hall could accommodate.

St. Louis, Mo., June 16—Having referred to the important passages in the speeches of Chairman Glynn and Senator James, it may be interesting to the readers of these great utterances to note the familiar use which both orators made of scriptural passages.

Governor Glynn showed acquaintance with both the old testament and the new, while Senator James embodied in his tribute to the President's struggle for peace a reference to Henry Dwinger's "Christ Upon the Battlefield," and quoted the injunction to "love one another" and the promise to "the peacemaker."

In taking the peace side of the issue before the country the Democratic will have the Bible on their side, and the Bible is a force among the plain people of the land.

It is a pity that national conventions cannot be passed around, as expositions are, for the benefit of different localities. The immediate neighbor is always best represented at conventions, the only exception being when marching clubs, or special trains loads of supporters, come from a distance for the purpose of booming a candidate.

As I look back over forty years of attendance upon national conventions I have a confused recollection of uniformed organizations, headed by brass bands, parading down the streets with banners of praise and prophecies.

New York, as a rule, leads the other cities in the number of such clubs, but Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Columbus and Louisville and other cities have thus contributed to the gaiety of conventions. The demonstrations in behalf of a candidate are supposed to exert an influence—that is why money is spent on installing the hosts—but they often reveal to a candidate supporters the unwelcome fact that the aspirant's popularity decreases in proportion as the square of the distance from his home increases.

Because there was no contest, this convention has lacked the marching clubs. The spectators have come as individuals, or as small groups, some to catch their first glimpses of men swayed by the enthusiasm of the crowds; others because they have formed the convention habit and want to be able to say "I have never missed a national convention in twenty or thirty or forty years."

The hotel lobby affords a meeting place where the veterans can regale the beginner with stories of former assemblages.

My own experience began in 1876, when, as a boy of sixteen, I attended the Democratic convention in St. Louis. Being a stranger among strangers I was indebted to a kind-hearted policeman who put me through a "show" and thus enabled me to attend one session.

In 1880 the convention was at Cincinnati, too far away for me to attend. In 1884 I was beginning the practice of law and did not feel that I could afford the expensive trip to Chicago, but an unexpected honor—an honor conferred at the close of a fourth of July address—supplied me with the necessary funds and I saw Cleveland nominated.

A friendly politician introduced me to an accommodating doorkeeper who supplied me with a ticket and allowed me to attend the sessions without a ticket. In 1892 I was able to secure a ticket; by 1912 I could get tickets for others. Since 1896 it has not been difficult to gain admittance.

DOROTHY DIX TELLS HOW STATE SCORES IN CASE AGAINST ORPET

By DOROTHY DIX.

Waukegan, June 16.—They brought into court the clothes that poor little Marian Lambert had on when she was found dead under the three oaks in Helms Woods.

On the top of the pile of neatly-folded garments was a heavy green top coat of some loosely-woven material and on the front, just above the waist line, were two perfectly round, shiny, white spots about the size of a dime.

They looked exactly as if two soda mint labels had adhered to the fibrous surface of the goods. Originally there were three of these white spots, but one of them had been carefully scraped and analyzed by a toxicologist, and found to be cyanide of potassium that had formed in that fashion from some heavy solution of the drug.

SEDIMENT FROM A LIQUID.

There was no mistaking the significance of these round spots. They were spilled from the bottle of poison out of which Marian Lambert drank her fatal draught. No dry powder dropped on her coat could have taken that form or hardened in that manner. Only the sediment from a liquid would have dried heavy and thick, in a drop.

Up near the lapel of the coat was a smear where there was cyanide mixed in the saliva that flowed from the dying girl's mouth.

But on the coat itself there were just the three drops from a superb solution of cyanide that was spilled by a shaking hand as the deadly draught was pressed to the girl's lips.

But whose hand it was, whether her own or William Orpet's, there was no clew to tell.

FACT NOT CONCLUSIVE

If Orpet killed the girl he could have killed her just as easily with the liquid cyanide as with the dry cyanide. If Marian Lambert committed suicide she could as easily have carried the poison with her in a liquid form as any other.

Even the fact that no bottle containing cyanide was found near the girl throws no light on the subject, because, if Orpet was the slayer of the murderer that the State says he was, he could have cleared himself by "planting" the bottle in the dead girl's hand just as easily and far more effectively than by disposing of it elsewhere.

And if he was simply the frightened kid, panic stricken, who fled from the scene of a tragedy which happened so suddenly and unexpectedly that it deprived him of his wits, it is not inconsistent with the theory of his innocence that he might have carried the bottle from the girl's hand as she swallowed the deadly potion, and almost automatically stuck it in his pocket, or made away with it to save the scandal, for reasons best known to fleeing the scene and leaving her alone dead in the woods.

So even what seems conclusive proof that Marian Lambert died from the effects of liquid cyanide does not solve the mystery of this strange case where everything is good to a certain point, and then goes to pieces against some circumstances that you cannot explain.

NO REASON FOR SUICIDE.

For after all is said, and every theory exploited, you can think of no adequate reason why Marian Lambert should kill herself, or of any reason whatever why William Orpet should slay her. And yet the girl is dead of cyanide poisoning, which either she took herself or Will Orpet gave her.

Everything about this case is out of the ordinary. And one of its weirdest moments has been that in which the undertaker, Mr. Marshall, discovered that out of nothingness the three damning white spots rose up on Marian's coat, like ghostly accusers of her slayer.

When the girl was found dead in the woods, Mr. Marshall telephoned for the undertaker, and he had gone and his body, freed from the ministrations of the undertaking rooms and was thawing it out. He had seen no stain on the coat which he had taken off Marian and spread across her knees, but as the heat penetrated the fabric he noted a little grayish white mist, that grew whiter and whiter and more distinct, until, against the dark green background, these three big, heavy white spots of cyanide stood out to tell in what manner she met her death.

WAS HEAVY DOSE.

Most of the day was taken up with the examination and cross-examination of Dr. Webster, who made the analysis of the contents of Marian's stomach and of the white deposit found in her hand and on her face, and who declared that she came to her death by taking a super-solution of cyanide of potassium.

He said he could form no idea of how much she took, but she must have gotten a very heavy dose as he found nearly five grains of cyanide in her stomach and as much of the drug would have been absorbed into her system.

Dr. Webster scoffed at the defence's contention that powdered cyanide would melt fast enough to form the coating that was found in the palm of Marian's hand. He said it required two parts of water to one of cyanide to dissolve it, and that it could not get that much moisture from the air.

One thing in Dr. Webster's testimony raised a very interesting question that neither the lawyers for the defence nor the prosecution seemed to care to investigate, and that was, did Marian Lambert twice try to kill herself with cyanide of potassium or did Orpet twice try to murder her with cyanide of potassium?

Dr. Webster, in explaining the effect of cyanide of potassium, said that the individual who took it suffered from suffocation and difficulty in breathing, and made gasping sounds as the cyanide formed a gas which congested the lungs.

In testifying to the illness that Marian Lambert had on the twentieth of January, during which he was called in to attend her, Dr. Parmenter said:

Marian's parents were awakened in the night by hearing her breathing noisily, and they were so alarmed they telephoned me. When I got there Mrs. Lambert told me that she believed that Marian had been poisoned and that somebody had given her the kind of pills they were using in the war.

Concerning the illness of Marian's, Josephine Davis had said that it occurred after she saw Marian with a box of pills, and that she said that Orpet had sent her.

UNCANNY COINCIDENT.

But on the witness stand Josephine testified that Marian had never said Orpet gave her the capsule, and that she just figured it out that Orpet had given it to her and said the district attorney so "out of spite."

Of course Marian's smothering spell and the capsule, and her dying with cyanide poisoning, may be mere coincidence, but they add an uncanny fact to this weird story of mystery.

The sight of poor little Marian's clothes as they were spread out in the court room, the evidence of the awful wrong from William Orpet the first hint of sorrow that he has shown during the whole trial.

Day after day, as he sat by his counsel's side, he was pale and drawn, sore pinched looking, until he seemed too physically exhausted to care what happens to him. His face has worn an expression of melancholy so deep that it has settled into a sort of stolid despair.

He did not move a muscle when Josephine flayed him in his opening address. He has not smiled when his counsel has scored a point. Nothing has seemed to matter. But today, when they brought in his little sweet, innocent clothes and the saw made of the little blue frock and white velvet hat with its bow on the back, and the little green coat, in which he had last seen her, his eyes filled with tears and his lips began trembling so that he had to put up his hands to hide them.

And for a long time afterward he sat staring down at the table, his mind filled with God knows what thoughts of sorrow and remorse and what unavailing wish that they might go back to last June and live this summer over again just differently.

Then at the fifth day of the trial and the State scored its first point in showing that Marian Lambert came to her death by cyanide of potassium taken in a liquid form, if that is a point and proves anything.

feet expostulating. The evidence was admitted by the judge:

"In my first test," said Dr. Webster, I discovered traces of the poison, but later it took two very delicate tests to show me that it was cyanide. I did find a derivative of potassium cyanide, but these tests indicated beyond all doubt that they came from the material from the nose or mouth of the defendant. There had been no potassium of cyanide present at any time."

Josiyn established a strong point for the prosecution when he drew an opinion from the witness as to whether Marian Lambert died in convulsions or not.

He did this through another hypothetical question. The witness was asked to assume that Marian had died with her schoolbooks clasped under her arm and that they remained there until her body was lifted by the undertaker. He was also asked to assume that her death was caused by a solution of cyanide of potassium.

"What was the condition in regard to that?" asked Josiyn.

"I have," said the witness.

"What is it?"

"DIED IN SPASM."

"It is my opinion that the girl died after one mighty tetanic spasm. Otherwise the books would have fallen from her arm."

He explained that there are two sorts of spasms—one of the tetanic sort where there is one great spasm, a mighty contraction of all the muscles of the body, and the other where there is an alternate contraction and relaxation of the muscles. He declared that in his opinion Marian Lambert died after a tetanic spasm.

Despite his defeat of yesterday, Attorney Porter continued to interrogate Dr. Webster concerning his deliquescent theory. This revolves upon the point that the poison may have been in powder form and that it was liquified by the presence of moisture in the girl's right hand. He drew an admission that to liquify 2 3-5 grains of cyanide of potassium, the amount found in the stomach of the girl, only a sixth of a teaspoonful of water would have been necessary to hold it in supersaturated solution.

Dr. Thomas D. McNally of Chicago, coroner's chemist, who made some of the poison analyses, took the stand immediately after Dr. Webster and testified that he had examined the spots found on Marian's green coat and found that they were caused by a supersaturated solution of potash alum cyanide. This directly corroborated Dr. Webster's earlier testimony.

MAY PROSECUTE PROVIDENCE ELOPER

Providence, June 16.—Criminal proceedings may be instituted against twenty-four-year-old Marshall Famigletti, brother of Alderman Vito Famigletti, as a result of his elopement to New York with seventeen-year-old Harriet Spencer of No. 64 Salina street, according to a statement made by the girl's mother today.

The mother, who is the wife of Loren G. Spencer, said she had not yet made up her mind whether to take the matter into the courts or to permit the couple to marry. Miss Spencer is at present said to be confined to her bed on the verge of a nervous breakdown, the result of having been taken into custody in New York with young Famigletti.

Mrs. Spencer told her story to the AMERICAN today as follows:

TOOK AUTO RIDES.

"My daughter met the young man two months ago. He is a brother of Alderman Famigletti, and a member of their contracting firm, which is now constructing a number of city buildings, including a police station. Young Famigletti owned an automobile, and as my daughter is very young, she began to go riding with him without my consent. I think he did call at the house once or twice, but I never gave it serious thought.

"Last Wednesday night I missed Harriet, and after making inquiries learned that she and Marshall Famigletti had gone to New York on the boat. I informed my husband, and he started immediately for New York with our son-in-law, Irving Dobson.

"Upon arrival the two men got in touch with the police, and Harriet and young Famigletti were taken into custody. My husband had intended to prosecute, but they pleaded so hard that he decided to bring them back to Providence and leave the handling of the affair to me.

"I haven't made up my mind what to do. I may decide to institute criminal proceedings, but if I become convinced that Harriet will be made happy by marriage to the young man, I probably will give my consent. His brother is prominent in State politics and is wealthy, but of course that will not influence me in making my decision.

MET BY ALDERMAN.

Alderman Famigletti, who met the party when they arrived here on the train, tried to discuss the matter with Mr. Spencer, but the latter refused to talk. Another attempt will be made today.

"I knew my brother was keeping company with some young woman," said the Alderman, "but I did not know who she was. If he wants to marry her I shall give my consent."

"FATHER" CLARK IS BACK FROM ORIENT

Bigelow Abandons Copper Case Fight; Will Pay $1,900,000

Counsel for Albert S. Bigelow, who was ordered to pay the Old Dominion Copper Mining & Smelting Company about $1,900,000, announced today that he had decided to abide by the decision of the Supreme Court and pay the amount.

The matter has been before the courts for a long time and was eventually taken to the United States Supreme Court, which sustained the decree of the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

The amount in question was said to have been secret profits derived by Bigelow from the sale of the Old Dominion Copper Company of Baltimore to the Old Dominion Copper Mining & Smelting Company.

On April 11, 1914, Bigelow petitioned for permission to file a bill of review, claiming to have secured additional evidence which would have caused the court to reverse its decision. The matter was given to Robert D. Weston to hear as master, and Mr. Weston was preparing his report when Bigelow's counsel appeared before Judge Carroll of the State Supreme Court and requested that the petition be dismissed.

It was announced that satisfactory arrangements for the payment of the money had been made.

Money for Young Husband Blocked by Mrs. Tilton

Mrs. Frances Duer Key Tilton of this city and Washington, whose youthful husband is said to have won a bet that he would meet her, marry her and secure part of her fortune in ninety days, has been informed that Justice Donnelly of New York has granted her injunction restraining young Tilton from receiving $17,000 due on mortgages she made over to him.

Tilton, who is twenty-three years old, was said to have been Mrs. Key's chauffeur, and the couple were married during an automobile trip from Washington to New York.

Mrs. Tilton left her youthful husband soon after the wedding, became reconciled to him, left him again three weeks ago, and spent last week in seclusion at the Waldorf-Astoria lest he again should seek to make his peace with her. She is living now at her country place in Maryland.

It is a great marble Italian villa, and none but women servants surround her there. She wouldn't talk with a correspondent who called on her there, beyond declaring that she and Tilton had separated finally.

"He followed me to New York last week," she said, "but I refused to see him. I know when I've had enough."

ARREST NEAR IN MELROSE MYSTERY

An arrest was expected today for the brutal murder of little Loretta Winifred Wakelin, in the woods of Swain's Pond Hill, District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County was closeted with a transcript of the evidence taken at the inquest held in the Malden Court, as it is anticipated of new police activity.

The little girl's body was found by her father, Andrew Wakelin, who carried it from the woods to the roadway and then notified the police. That was after he had first telephoned to the authorities about the disappearance of the child, who was sent home for a school book by her teacher, Miss Minna Foster.

A score or more witnesses testified at the inquest, among them Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wakelin, their son and daughters, State Officers Eustace and Smith and a newspaper man.

Chief Kerr and State Officers Smith and Eustace have been in constant touch with District Attorney Corcoran since the latter received the transcript of evidence, and it is now declared that the next move in the case will be made from the East Cambridge office of the prosecutor.

Chief Kerr was much disturbed over the report that he had consulted a clairvoyant to find the murderer of the little Wakelin girl. He declared:

I sent a tip to come to Boston yesterday to see a woman who was reported to know something about the murder. When I got there, I found it was the work of a press agent, anxious to boom the business of a clairvoyant.

I've been in the police business nearly forty years and do not believe in clairvoyancy of any sort. When I found the woman was a clairvoyant, I came to the conclusion she knew nothing about the case. But I was much incensed at her press agent for putting off such a stunt. I'm glad the newspapers did not publish the name and place of the woman's business.

MRS. SKEFFINGTON ASKS PUBLIC INQUIRY

London, June 16.—The lawyer for Mrs. F. Sheehy Skeffington, widow of the editor of the Irish Citizen, who was executed without trial during the recent Irish uprising, has written to Premier Asquith that his client is profoundly dissatisfied with the findings of the court-martial and urgently pressing for a public inquiry. The court-martial found Captain Bowen Colthurst of the Royal Irish Rifles, who ordered the execution of Skeffington and two other journalists, guilty of murder, but held that he was insane at the time the acts were committed.

HOLD 3 AS RESULT OF SMASHUP

Four men and a woman were injured in automobile accidents in Greater Boston today.

In Winchester a farm wagon driven by Michael Morris and an automobile containing three men collided. All four men were injured.

In Dedham, an automobile containing Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Benson of No. 611 Madison avenue, Elizabeth, N. J., and Mrs. Arthur of Elizabeth, went over a fifteen-foot bank when Benson, driving, tried to avoid a tip-cart coming on the hill on the wrong side of Common street.

The front wheel of his machine hit the tip cart and twisted the steering gear from his hands. The machine went down the banking, and Mrs. Benson was thrown forward against the windshield, suffering a broken nose. Mr. Benson and Mrs. Hume escaped uninjured.

THREE MEN ARRESTED.

Three of the men figuring in the Winchester accident were arrested, one charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated and the other two with being drunk.

The injured men are:

Hugh H. Rooney, No. 215 Main street, Woburn, cuts about the head, treated at the police station and held for driving an automobile while intoxicated.

Charles F. Ward, No. 16 Porter street, Woburn, cut lip, treated at police station, held on charge of being drunk.

George Stubbs, No. 10 High street, Woburn, cut head and elbow, treated at police station, held on drunkenness charge.

Michael Morris, employed on J. W. Russell, Jr.'s, farm, slight injuries.

ONE HORSE SHOT.

Morris was driving a farm wagon around a curve near Syme's corner when the automobile came whirling along.

The machine hit the farm wagon head on, so that the pole of the wagon was driven into the engine of the automobile and damaged the whole front of the machine. One horse was bruised and cut, but a leg of the other was broken and the animal was later shot.

Mrs. Hume said the machine was going at high speed. The police say he was on the right side of the road.

John H. Hughes, superintendent of the Putnam Machine Company of Fitchburg, and Carl E. Lindstrom, production manager of the same firm, were killed early yesterday when their automobile skidded off the road and struck a ledge near that city.

FIVE FINED FOR MILK VIOLATION

Five persons were fined $10 each in the East Boston court for selling milk without being licensed. They were Giovanino B. Remisusio, Porter street; Donato Mastantuo, Cottage street; Elizabeth Fulham, Byron street; Celino Pino, Chelsea street, and Odazio Pino, Maverick street. Dr. James L. Sullivan, city milk inspector, brought the complaints. Jennie Abbruzzi was fined $25 for selling renovated butter.

HOLD CAMPBELL AS TARGET OF FIN. COM.

The question they were asking at City Hall today was this:

"Will the Mayor carry out the Finance Commission's recommendation that he force Clerk Francis A. Campbell of the Superior Court to pay to the city $12,953.85 in interest money on funds deposited in the city clerk's office?"

The Finance Commission in a lengthy report made public today charged:

1—That Mr. Campbell had failed to deposit at interest all money received by the clerk's office, although an act passed in 1910 requires him to deposit the money.

2—That a total of $12,959.35 is now due the city as interest.

Mr. Campbell's reply is that he believes the law to be unconstitutional, and that in any case he found it necessary to keep cash in his office so that he might pay in cash if asked to do so.

COMMISSION'S REPLY.

The commission rejoins: If the law is unconstitutional, he should have secured an opinion of the court to that effect; and though he says he needed cash on hand, only $500 was paid out by him in cash in twelve years, and only $100 in the past four years.

Mr. Campbell has kept in his office, the commission found, funds ranging from $1,600 to $5,400.

The Finance Commission apparently began its investigation of Mr. Campbell's work in April, 1915. From then till February 23, of this year, Mr. Campbell refused to allow the commission to audit his books.

He was finally forced to do so after an appeal to the Attorney-General and to Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court.

The commission recommends that the Mayor instruct the corporation counsel to take steps to force Campbell to deposit money as required by law, to pay the interest owed the city, and to examine his returns to the city collector.

$441,589.40 PAID IN.

Clerk Campbell, in his twelve years in office, has had charge of $441,589.40, paid into court by litigants. Of this amount, according to the commission, which quotes from a report of its accountants, $153,377.25 was paid out by order of the court to litigants winning their suits. This left a balance on February 21, 1916, of $288,178.25. The report explains:

"The balance now remaining on hand is $4,447.87, the source of only $400 of which is now known. The accountants state that Mr. Campbell in April and August, 1914, began retaining part of the money and not depositing it as required.

"In 1911 the amount not deposited increased to a considerable extent. In 1912 the amount not deposited increased so much that at the end of seven months of that year the balance undeposited was approximately $6,000. * * * In 1916 the amount deposited exceeded 1914 receipts by $1,995.50, thus reducing the balance undeposited on February 21, 1916, at the time of the examination by the county controller, to $2,626.16.

"The accountants' report on the interest shows that Mr. Campbell, at the time of their examination, February 23, 1916, had in the bank interest money amounting to $10,706.73, in addition to the old account.

$12,959.35 OWED CITY.

"If this old account is considered as interest, and the accountants believe it should be, the total amount of interest money held at the present time by Mr. Campbell is $13,134.60. A part, however, is interest upon money which has not been disposed of by the court. Of this $15,154.60, the part which is interest on money which the court has disposed of amounts to $8,811.48.

"This, with the old account, $4,147.87, makes a total of $12,959.35, which should have been paid by Mr. Campbell to the collector of the city of Boston, under the provisions of Chapter 270 of the Acts of 1910."

200,000 AUSTRIAN PRISONERS, LATEST PETROGRAD FIGURES

London, June 16—The capture of 200 more Austro-German officers and 14,000 men by the Russian army under General Brusiloff was announced today by the War Office in Petrograd.

It is unofficially reported from Petrograd that the prisoners taken by the Czar's troops since the new drive of the Galician army now total 200,000.

Although no official announcement has been made of the capture of Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina, by the Russian forces, military experts in Petrograd believe that the city is already held by the Czar's troops.

The southernmost Russian army, which has pressed into Bukowina from Bessarabia has beaten the Austro-Hungarians back all along the Pruth and Dneister Rivers, and even if Czernowitz has not fallen the Russians have achieved a victory of the first rank.

The fighting in Bukowina has been marked as elsewhere by the enormous number of prisoners and the great mass of booty captured by the troops of General Brusiloff.

Demoralized by the heavy artillery fire of the Russians and apparently thrown into confusion by the loss of men, the Austro-Hungarians fled in disorder or gave themselves up as prisoners.

The Russians are now attacking at many points on a 400-mile front. Strong positions prepared by the soldiers of Field Marshal von Hindenburg are pounded day and night by the Russian guns.

North of Przewloka the Russians are delivering hard blows against the army of General von Bothmer. Von Bothmer's army has been forced to part in the drive against the Russians, led by the German field marshal, Von Mackensen, last year.

The German War Office today reported a reprise for the Russians in the capture of 600 Russians north of Przemloka. The German statement says:

"East front—The Russians on Thursday continued their efforts against the position held by General von Bothmer north of Przemloka. The enemy was repulsed every where and we captured over 600 prisoners."

The men said Levy failed to pay them and last night they attempted to collect from him.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

WAR SUMMARY

Czernowitz, so far as official bulletins go, is still in Austrians hands, which is hard to understand if the Russian offensive is making even slight progress northwest of that city.

The Russian official bulletin today made these assertions:

1—That the offensive continues, at points unnamed.

2—That the Russians were repulsed at a point named, and repulsed an attack at another specified point.

3—That the number of prisoners jumped 30,000 over night, totalling about 150,000.

4—That the Teutons are counter-attacking or organizing new defences.

The first statement—if it be taken to mean that the offensive made any appreciable progress—is undoubtedly false. The second bears the marks of truth; the third is ridiculous, and the fourth is obviously true.

The Austrians report repulsing Russian attacks south of Boyan and north of Czernowitz and at Baranovichi, and the Germans report repulsing Russian attacks north of Przewloka.

German attacks at Verdun have been resumed in force, but failed to make any gains, according to the French official statement. The French announced the capture of a German trench south of "Dead Man's Hill." That height has been for ten days wholly in German hands.

The Italians report the capture of a trench from the Austrians. Austrian attacks were repulsed. Heavy artillery fighting is reported along the front in the hills south of the Arsiero-Asiago line.

The Russians had the better of a minor naval encounter in the Baltic. Torpedo boats and destroyers surprised a German convoy of merchant vessels and auxiliaries. The merchant ships fled and escaped; one German auxiliary cruiser was destroyed.

The front in Flanders was quiet.

Talk of a general allied offensive attained proportions today that may be taken as indicating an approaching movement of importance. If an "allied drive" is to come this Summer, it must start soon or the time will be too short for a decisive stroke before the Fall.

FRENCH CHECK ATTACKS AT VERDUN

By International News Service.

London, June 16.—The repulse of numerous attacks delivered by the Germans on the Verdun front last night was announced today in the official War Office today.

Assaults were delivered against the French position at Thiaumont farm, Hill 321, Hill No. 320 and in Caillette Wood.

All the attacks broke down under the heavy artillery and machine gun fire of the French.

Following is the text of the French War Office announcement:

"On the left bank of the Meuse, the Germans, during the night launched several violent counter-attacks against trenches captured by us on the slopes south of Le Mort Homme (Dead Man's Hill). All were repulsed. The total number of German prisoners captured by us has reached 140, of whom five were officers.

"On the right bank the enemy delivered 6 o'clock last night operated a powerful offensive against our positions north of Thiaumont farm and between hills No. 320 and 321. Our infantry and machine gun fire successfully dispersed all these attacks. The Germans lost heavily.

FIRE CHECKED ADVANCE.

"Further to the eastward, after a violent bombardment with shells of large calibre, the Germans attacked our advanced trenches south of Caillette woods about 10 o'clock last night. Our barrage fire quickly prevented their debouching. Pushing a movement which has sprung up and which is finding some impetus in attacking the government—the chancellor said he had tried to reach an understanding with England in order to prevent the war and check the expansion of Russia, but failed.

"I am not ashamed to admit," exclaimed Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, "even if it did fail. Whosoever considers this a crime after witnessing the world catastrophe of the past two years—he may answer for his attitude before God. I await my judgment with calmness."

PLEA FOR UNITY.

The speaker made a strong plea for a unity of political parties, saying, "If see the whole nation struggling in gigantic heroism for the future. Our sons and brothers are united in fire and bloodshed. They are united by love of their fatherland whether it means wealth or poverty.

"I love our nation and I trust firmly that we shall stand this test, whether the enemy fighting until victory is finally won."

The Chancellor was frequently interrupted by applause.

The Chancellor's speech was answered by party leaders in the Reichstag. Among those who followed Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg on the floor was George Grabnauer, a Socialist, who declared that the Socialists believe the Chancellor had tried to prevent the war and that the party would support no new war credits bill.

Dr. Graduauer said that Germany would welcome President Wilson's efforts for peace if the country could be sure that they would be absolutely impartial.

would have to be conducted on the basis of the war map. This statement indicated that Germany would not consider any peace proposal from a neutral nation.

Asquith's speech was rejected by our enemies, who refused to recognize the war map, the chancellor said. They hope to be able to change the war map. In the meantime the war map has undergone other changes, but all to our advantage.

MAP HAS CHANGED.

We have entered into that map the capitulation of the English army at Kut el Amara and French defeats at Verdun, as well as the failure of the Russian offensive and the powerful advantage of our ally Austria against Italy and the increased strength of our lines at Salonica.

"We must and will continue fighting until decisive victory is won. We thought it our duty to open the road for peace, but we were refused by the enemy with scorn and disdain.

"Some statesmen in England tried to feel our pulse and ternify our strength by watchwords of inner dissolution, but they are not in power. With a mass of strange ideas if they will want to destroy themselves they will have noticed how firmly the heart of the German nation is beating. There is no foreign influence that should shake our unity.

"The chancellor took occasion to criticise sharply the Pan-German movement which has sprung up and which is finding some impetus in attacking the government—the chancellor said he had tried to reach an understanding with England in order to prevent the war and check the expansion of Russia, but failed.

"I am not ashamed to admit," exclaimed Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, "even if it did fail. Whosoever considers this a crime after witnessing the world catastrophe of the past two years—he may answer for his attitude before God. I await my judgment with calmness."

SAYS GERMANY IS EAGER FOR PEACE

'PEACE ON WAY,' GERARD TOLD GERMANS

New York, June 16.—A copy of the Muenchener Zeitung of May 26, which has arrived here, contains one of the interviews with James W. Gerard, American Ambassador to Germany, on the subject of peace which figured in recent cable dispatches from Berlin.

German papers printed two interviews with Mr. Gerard, one published in the Muenchener Zeitung, which he repudiated.

Both interviews were the subject of a long article in the Reichstag in the course of which Count von Westarp, leader of the Conservatives, made a bitter attack on Mr. Gerard and the American government. Upon the ambassador's repudiation of the interview in the National Zeitung Count von Westarp publicly retracted his remarks and apologized to Mr. Gerard.

In the authentic interview now at hand the American ambassador emphasizes these three points:

1. That President Wilson, unlike Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Root, has steadfastly worked for the maintenance of peace.

2. That Washington is ready and willing to further any steps toward a conclusion of the European war.

3. That peace is already "on the way."

GERARD OPTIMISTIC.

The text of the article in the Muenchener Zeitung follows:

"The Ambassador of the United States in Berlin, Mr. Gerard, in a lengthy conversation with a representative of the Muenchener Zeitung, spoke in an extremely optimistic tone about our relations with America and with regard to the peace question. In connection with the most recent exchange of notes between the two countries he said, among other things:

"That the opinion held in wide circles in Germany that President Wilson was the only one among the leading politicians in America who is manifesting a hostile attitude toward Germany was erroneous.

"That there are in the United States three parties—Democrats, Republicans and Progressives, whose main spokesman are, respectively, Wilson, Elihu Root and Roosevelt.

"Of these men, Mr. Gerard asserted, Root and Roosevelt energetically demanded war with Germany after the Lusitania crisis, while Wilson worked for peace and asserted his will. Mr. Wilson, the ambassador said, steadfastly clung to his determination to maintain peace and to assure it for the future.

BLAMES INTRIGUERS.

"The burden of the blame for the fact that the exchange of notes between the two governments often had a form which were not at all intended Mr. Gerard laid at the doors of intriguers and meddlers.

"Above all, much trouble was caused, in the opinion of the American diplomat, by the lack of dissemination of reliable information.

"However, continued Mr. Gerard the crisis is now happily passed, and I cannot see from what side a new clouding of the relations of good relations could threaten."

"The American Ambassador emphasized that it was at all times ready to treat with the utmost caution any reports and rumors which savor of inspiration from interested meddlers, and that the exercise of such caution actually during a duty which, not undoubtedly the case now, besides the military mines, political mines are scattered almed primarily at effecting neutrals.

"Mr. Gerard then touched upon the much-reported question of peace. He said, now that the re-enforcement of good relations was completed, President Wilson's government could face with much greater freedom of action the gigantic world problem of helping to bring the great conflict to a close. He added that it was futile at this moment to discuss the question as to whether peace mediation through President Wilson was desired or probable.

NEUTRALS HOPE FOR PEACE.

"He pointed out that in this respect facts alone can speak, and suggested that one of the most important facts was that in the neutral countries the hope of an early peace was usually a ardent as among the belligerents. America herself urgent- ly desires peace, the Ambassador asserted, and for this very reason, if for no other, it was the duty of the American government to look to the citizens of the United States to support everything which could serve the cause of peace.

"The principal fact remains, continued the Ambassador, that the government is really ready and willing to do everything to further the idea of peace, and I will add that the settlement of the difficulties between the United States and Germany was imperative before it was possible for the American government resolutely to face the question of peace.

"'I am very optimistic with regard to the progress which the idea of peace is manifesting also in the belligerent powers.

"The wise and moderate words of the Imperial Chancellor concerning Germany's willingness for peace perhaps have already had a very strong effect and reaffirmed the impression that calmness and composure will dictate all further steps on Germany's part.

"In closing the interview, Mr. Gerard said:

"Though weeks and months may still pass before the idea of peace assumes substantial form, nothing can in the wayer in my confidence that peace is already on the way."

STOCKS AND INVESTMENTS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, with the market still dull and lacking in feature. Prices were a shade above the opening range. Crucible Steel and Mexican Petroleum also advanced a point. Locomotive was the most active copper. Railways had improved.

Declines at 12 o'clock included Butte & Superior, ex-dividend, 2; Inspiration, 1; Utah Copper, ex-dividend, ¼; Tennessee Copper, ½; Sugar 1¾; American Locomotive ¼; Studebaker ¼; Canadian, ¼; Industrial Alcohol ½; St. Paul ¼; New Haven ¾ and Northern Pacific ½.

Among gains are American Zinc, ex-dividend, 1⅜; Crucible 1; Mexican Petroleum 1; Maxwell ¾; Marine preferred ¾; Chino ¼; Kennecott ¼; Anaconda ¼; American Can ¼; Southern Pacific ¼; Reading ¼; Chesapeake & Ohio ¼; Lehigh Valley ¼; Baltimore & Ohio ¼; Union Pacific ¼ and American Smelting ⅝. U. S. Steel was unchanged.

The Boston market was relatively stronger, with the bulk of trading in Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies common. Gains included American Zinc, ex-dividend 1⅜; Gulf common 1; preferred 1¼ at 59¾, a record high. Boston & Montana ¼; Copper & Arizona 1; Copper Range ¼; Granby ¾; North Butte ⅜; Osceola 1; Shannon ¼ and U. S. Smelting ⅝.

Among declines were Butte & Superior, ex-dividend, 1½; Mohawk ¾ and U. S. Smelting ⅝.

There was not much price movement during the morning on the Boston Curb. Among issues to open higher were Verde Extension and Butte & London. Rilla was lower. Boston & Montana was unchanged. Little alteration in prices occurred up to noon.

Uncertainty as to the result of the controversy between railroads and employes, and reports as to the Mexican outlook, caused hesitancy in the New York market. Prices ruled a little lower at the opening. The market was narrow and dull. Price changes had no significance in most instances. Trading was professional. There is little inclination to either buy or sell with prices around the present level. Butte & Superior and American Beet Sugar were among the weakest issues in early trading. The market remained irregular all the morning. Railways were the most active and the weakest class at the start.

In Boston the market had about the same aspect as in New York. Atlantic Gulf and West Indies common continued to be the feature, selling at a new record price. Coppers seemed a little stronger.

RULES OF HEALTH FOR DYSPEPTICS

DIETING UNNECESSARY

There are two ways by which people who suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach, flatulence, etc., can relieve themselves of their ailments. First, as practically all cases of the above are directly or indirectly traceable to acidity and fermentation, they can eliminate from their diet all foods which ferment and form acid, such as all starches and sugar and foods containing them, thus prohibiting bread, potatoes, fruits and most meats. About the only safe foods are gluten bread, spinach and eggs, instead of white meat of chicken or turkey. This diet is almost a starvation one, but it is sometimes quite necessary in cases where other methods fail, especially to those who like to eat hearty meals of good foods, to such whatever is necessary, especially to administer the acid and stop fermentation by the use of a good antacid such as Bisurated Magnesia, a teaspoonful of which in a little water immediately after eating or whenever pain is felt, instantly neutralizes the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work without pain or hindrance. Owing to its simplicity, convenience and effectiveness this latter plan is now being adopted, instead of the old-fashioned, expensive, weakening starvation process. In this connection it is interesting to note that since the widespread use of bisurated magnesia, as established many druggists have arranged to supply it in 5-grain tablet form, as well as their own original and in a measure of the powder form and some of them even advertise it by that name.

New England at War

Not all New England, perhaps, but a decidedly interesting group of young Bostonians and New Englanders.

They are skirmishing through the woods around Plattsburg at a great rate. Each battle has its list of killed and wounded. Some of the Boston boys have been killed as often as the Crown Prince, wounded as often as the Kaiser, and captured as often as von Kluck.

Willard H. Davis is one of them. He went up there for the AMERICAN, and his daily letters with their chatty details of the camp life and the battles and sudden deaths are good reading. Watch for them; and watch, particularly, for the unusually interesting letter to be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN—with an ample outlay of photographs from the camp.

TRADE EXPERT SPEAKS TO CHAMBER

A luncheon under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce was given to Dr. Edward E. Pratt, chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, at the Exchange Club today. Walter C. Fish, second vice-president of the Chamber, presided.

Dr. Pratt urged that "commonsense" is the secret of success in foreign trade. He said foreign trade is different from domestic trade only in details, and that success in either may be won by the application of the same principles.

He cited a number of instances where American business men had thrown away business opportunities in foreign countries by ignorance of the laws, customs or geography, or by indifference to the requirements of potential customers.

He urged the necessity of careful translations of letters sent to patrons in other countries and cited as examples of the poor impression that can be made by bad translation a number of letters from Japanese business firms, translated into the Japanese idea of English. He concluded thus:

"These incidents illustrate a very fundamental point which might be summarized as follows: Use common sense in exporting. Give your export trade as careful attention as you would give your domestic trade. Put a capable and intelligent man in charge of your export department.

"Protect your agents abroad as carefully as you protect your salesmen and agents in the United States. Pay as liberal attention to the foreign purchases which are in vogue in foreign countries as you would pay to trade practices in the United States. Make the kind of goods which will sell best in foreign markets. Apply to foreign credits the same principles and methods that you would apply to domestic credits."

Who's Found a Diamond Ring? Girl Sadly Asks

Three weeks ago Miss L. Lindgren of Somerville was one of the happiest girls in the world, and today she is one of the saddest, for she has lost her beautiful diamond engagement ring.

As every woman will understand, the ring perhaps meant more to its owner than anything else in life, with the exception of the person who gave it to her.

Miss Lindgren, who has big blue eyes and corn-colored hair, boarded a Boston & Maine train at Somerville Wednesday, bound for the office of the Boston AMERICAN, where she is employed as a stenographer. When she left her home the ring was in her pocketbook, but upon arriving at the office, she discovered to her dismay that it was missing. It may have been dropped on the train, or on the way from the North Station to the AMERICAN office.

If the finder of the ring will return it to its owner, he or she may be sure that the action will make at least one person absolutely happy.

FIND BAY STATE ROAD SYSTEM DEPLORABLE

The Bay State Street Railway Company's system is in a deplorable condition and it will take a big fund to put it into proper shape according to a report of George W. Bishop, chief of the Inspection Department of the Public Service Commission, filed today.

Mr. Bishop declared that the company officials had been "robbing the property" until "every dollar of its surplus has been exhausted," and dismissed as dangerous to the safety of passengers the suggestion of Expert Bion J. Arnold of Chicago for increased fares.

The Arnold report was made the subject of discussion at the opening of the fare-increase inquiry today, and the commission will decide whether or not the Chicago expert will be called to testify.

H. W. Hayes, chief of the engineering division of the Public Service Commission, to whom was delegated the task of checking up the accuracy of the report of Mr. Bishop, the cost of the Bay State property, also filed his report today. Mr. Chapman declared the land values a part of the records of the issuance.

Although without exception the engineer finds that the unit prices used by Expert Robert M. Fuselier are "reasonable," he cares to commend Mr. Bishop's report in part as follows:

MANY CARS UNFIT.

"Defective cross ties should be replaced at the rate of 195,000 a year to make the track safe. Worn out rails should be replaced with rails of a heavier section. Hand signals should be supplanted by a modern signal system at a cost of $240,000. This work should be done at once in the interest of safe and economical operation.

"The company reports that 2,111 cars have electric equipment and are available for service. However, a recent inspection made by this department shows that 164 cars have not been used for a considerable length of time and should be consigned to the scrap heap. Of 382 cars held in use for the good of the service, should be retired soon; that 246 passenger cars now in use should be substantially rebuilt or retired from service soon.

"The cars of this company have been sadly neglected during the past few years, which has not been in the interest of good service or true economy. In my opinion the company is in need of at least 200 additional modern, satisfactory cars to improve the service. This would require an expenditure of $1,000,000.

"Reports on certain portions of the system is incentive to reckless operation of cars, the grades to make up for the time lost on ascending grades, and results in delays of service. The sum of $215,000 should be spent at once on the power system.

JAY SMITH'S COMPLAINTS.

"The commission has, from time to time, received numerous just complaints concerning the inadequate service rendered by the Bay State. The investigation of such complaints has almost invariably disclosed a lack of turnouts, signals, power and equipment necessary for rendering to the public the reasonable service to which it is entitled. The consideration of matters of this nature under such conditions is very unsatisfactory when relief is not in sight."

With regard to Expert Arnold's suggestion for more speed, Inspector Bishop reports as follows:

"My attention has been called to the low average rate of speed made by the cars of the Bay State. I am of the opinion that this suggestion may be safely forgotten at this time. About one half of the mileage of the company is in thickly populated cities or villages here the speed of cars is already sufficiently high to insure safety."

The men were hoisting coal from the lighter. As one of the bags was being swung to the deck it broke loose and precipitated the sailors over the ship's side.

All with the exception of Doherty escaped with slight bruises and lacerations. Doherty was taken to the Naval Hospital in Chelsea.

The injured are: James Butler of Hanson, Thomas Lehane of Bryantville, Charles Cudworth of South Hanson, Walter George of South Hanson and John Dalne of Campello.

Motorman Henry F. Bryan stuck to his post, and though thrown from the car when it struck the tree escaped without injury. Herbert Goodwin, conductor, was unhurt.

HARVARD FRESHMEN DEFY TRADITION

Freshmen life in Harvard will soon develop into one sensation after another. Eugene B. Weinberg of the 1919 class started the fashion last year and it promises to avoiding the upper classmen and standing by his guns when his own classmates attempted to make a football player of him, have added two more apostles to the motionless preparedness brigade among the freshmen.

The two 1919 men, whose dash of brush on their upper lips is to remain a college secret, through the publication of the Freshman Red Book, are Walter M. Hoifer, aged twenty, of Cambridge, and Franklin C. Webster, also twenty, of Nantucket.

MAN RUNS ABOUT WITH THROAT CUT

With a razor in one hand and blood streaming from a gaping wound in his throat, Nicholas Weinart of Ruggles street ran through the rooms of a lodging house today, and at length dropped unconscious to the floor. Weinart was taken to the City Hospital, where he was pronounced dead from suicide. Shortly before 9 o'clock the landlady, Catherine Rotherbush, heard peculiar cries issuing from the second floor. She went upstairs, according to the police, and saw Weinart, who was forty-two years old, stagger out of a room. The man ran from one room to another, on the second floor, and then going down stairs, unconscious. No cause is known for his act.

Pirates a Braves Jinx

Clubs to Clash Today

BY HERMAN NICKERSON

The Braves have yet to win a game from the Pirates. During their visit to the Smoky City they were beaten twice and tested two days owing to the rain. In the first game of the series at Braves Field they didn't display anything that looked dangerous, and one of the Pirates showed them how to go from first to third on an infield out, and Wagner did the rest. So it is three games for the Pirates and nothing for the Braves.

The day was not one upon which any pitcher could do much pitching, and this was responsible for the loaves on base and the slow games and possibly the poor hitting. The game was not what one could call exciting, though there were times when it looked like a ball game.

Hanna Wagner was there with his dredger-like pair of hands, bowed down into the suit after the rags to abet any attempt coming his way. Some of them his throws were deliberate but had just the right amount of speed to carry ahead and the runner

JOE SCHULTZ THERE.

An old friend, once a member of the Braves, drove three hits out in his first three trips at bat. Joe Schultz didn't have many fielding chances, the Braves were hardly hitting that hard, but he stung that ball.

The Miracle Men when they go on the knees didn't seem to know what to do, so there was little use getting them over. Seven hits for one run is pretty poor work.

Each day sees something new in the way of an outfield combination which was possible by Maranville's injury to his weak wrist, when he ran into the wall catching that fly ball that saved the game with the Reds. This time the combination was Connolly, Compton, Collins and Wilhoit, the latter getting two hits, scoring the only run.

As has been the case since the home series of the club opened, the pitching was good enough to win with, but the help needed didn't arrive. The team hasn't as yet shown any signs of a return in that spirit which put the team in the race. There is not anything in the way of concerted action. The batting is sporadic and that tells the story. One day one player hits. The next is a new one and so on. Perhaps the warm weather may help. By the way this warm weather stuff is an awful joke. Perhaps it is not to be any Summer after all. To the few who shivered and shook through the game Thursday it seemed more like Winter.

Jimmy Nihlean has his Pirates in shape apparently, and each man appears to be eager to win. Jim isn't much on the counter stuff, and works rather quietly. If his pitching staff can pitch anything but there doesn't appear to be much danger that the infield will be the cringer of the outfield for all its legs chasing extra base swats.

Unless it snows today there will be a game.

Do You Twiddle Your Cigar?

If you do, it means one thing. If you don't, it is "something else again," as Abie would say. Science, finding nothing too insignificant to deserve study, has discovered that the old adage "As a man thinks, so is he," might well read, "As a man holds his cigar, so is he." The whole matter is entertainingly set forth in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

JOHNSON-CANER ON IN TENNIS FINALS

Harry C. Johnson disposed of Nathaniel W. Niles, ex-State champion, in the semi-finals of the Massachusetts singles championship tournament, at the Longwood Cricket Grounds in straight sets.

The afternoon Johnson plays G. Coker Caner, the Harvard captain-elect, in the final, and tomorrow morning the winner meets H. P. Gardiner, Jr., the present title-holder, losing C. Wright was defeated by Caner in the semi-finals in straight sets.

LAST NIGHT IN THE RING.

Lawrence, June 16.—Referee Tommy Sullivan declared the twelve-round bout between Al Stubert of New Bedford and "Battling" Boddy of New York a draw. The decision was none too popular, as the bulk of the fans were rooting for Boddy. Both are superior scrapping. Jimmy Hughes won from Edward Gannon, eight rounds; and Jack Totten stopped Young Bewer Leonard in the second round. A capacity house attended.

Coney Island, June 16.—Pete Hartley of New York easily bested Bud Palmer of Bridgeport, in a twelve-round bout. Palmer was floored in the seventh round.

New York, June 16.—Willie Ross, the New Brunswick, N. J., lightweight, knocked out Young Billy Paske of Yonkville in the eighth round of the Premier Club show.

Joe Connolly on With Flynn in C. A. C. Ring

Joe Connolly, the Watertown welterweight, who has won all but one of his bouts since turning professional, clashes with Eddie Flynn of Peabody, one of this section's ring veterans, in the chief number of tonight's Commercial A. C. boxing card.

It promises to be productive of a gay slugging melee. Following Saturday's Bunker Hill A. C. show, Connolly is likewise Flynn's long suit, though Eddie is likewise the owner of a fair amount of science.

Tommy Ash Chung, the Salem Chinaman, and Young Kenny of Wakefield, evenly matched, and Tom Varlos of Brighton, a former national amateur champion, and "Pat" Kelly of Charlestown, six rounders, are the numbers listed to complete the program.

Referee Sheehan will referee all four set-tos. The show is carded to start at 8 p. m. The clubs quarters are at No. 3 Devonshire street, West End.

GROVER ASKS FREEDOM.

Cleveland, June 16.—Grover Lowdermilk will ask—and on a big leaguer, has asked the Cleveland Club to make him a free agent. He hails no going to Portland, Ore., where he is offered a berth.

Yale's Lineups Settled

White in Harvard Boat

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 16.—Coach Guy Nickalls of Yale regards the three eights, which will race Harvard a week from today, as settled in makeup.

The fact that Captain Page of the freshmen crew has returned to his seat at No. 6 in first-class condition and that the veteran John Fitzpatrick in his promotion to No. 6 in the varsity eight, is in his old-time form, has established the permanence of the present rowing order.

Al Harvard the condition of H. S. Middendorf, No. 6 in the varsity eight, is not quite recovered from the shell through illness last Monday, has made the final makeup of the Crimson crews uncertain.

Today it was admitted at the Harvard camp the chances were against Middendorf getting his seat back. He has resumed light practice but is not expected to do more than take pair-oar work before next week.

If the Harvard eight is crowded for a one-mile time trial this afternoon or tomorrow, Middendorf will be clearly out of condition for such a severe test. As time rowing will close tomorrow night, he will have practically no chance to get back into form and have his endurance tested before regatta day.

TAYLOR IN FINE FORM.

Since his departure from the crew, which was caused by a heavy cold, Moss Taylor has shown the best form of his life at No. 6, and White, who has been promoted from the second crew to No. 5, has strengthened it.

Yale's final attempt to send its crews over the racing distance will be the most destructive attempt to round them into form for the old-time sort of Guy Nickalls as coach.

The veteran English rowing instructor has succeeded in getting satisfactory results from only his freshmen eight. This is a severe test, as the crew is the river and it is a favorite in its event with Harvard and Yale.

On the other hand, the Yale second varsity eight was beaten by the Yale freshmen yesterday, while the Harvard second varsity eight was defeating the Harvard first varsity. These races have made the Harvard second eight a keen favorite over the Yale reserve varsity crew.

YALE DEMANDS ODDS.

The fact that the Harvard first varsity eight rowed its fast time trial in 19 minutes, 41 seconds last Saturday, while the Yale first eight has done no better than 20 minutes, 2 seconds, has caused Yale backers to demand odds from Harvard in the betting. Yale will tackle the four-mile distance either today or tomorrow in a final "get-together" row-over trial.

Harvard seems to fare even worse than Yale in the matter of new shells. After considerable experimenting the Harvard management has awarded its three new boats, which were bought this season, and the Yale first and second varsity, as well as the freshmen eight, will row their races against Yale in shells that are either one or two years old.

The Yale freshmen eight will row its race next Friday in a shell which is of 1916 make, but the shells in which the first and second varsity eights are seated at present are one or two years old and have already been used in races against Harvard and several of Yale's other intercollegiate rivals.

The cool and damp weather has caused the Harvard crews to kindle bonfires on the lawn in front of their quarters. The oarsmen never spent a session before at Red Top with the weather conditions so closely resembling those of early Spring.

MIKE DOOLAN GETS JOB WITH M'GRAW

New York, June 16.—Manager McGraw of the Giants signed Mike Doolan, the veteran shortstop, who started the season with the Cubs but was released by the latter to Atlanta. ATLANTA WILL PROTEST.

Atlanta, Ga., June 16.—The Atlanta club intends fighting for possession of Mike Doolan, released to the locals by the Cubs and now claimed by the New York Nationals.

Leland Spurns Offers from League Clubs

With tempting offers from four big league clubs staring him in the face, "Cement" Leland, who was selected leader of the Tufts varsity baseball nine last night, has decided to turn down all opportunities and still remain a collegian ballplayer. Big league scouts have been trailing the leader of the college world in hitting ever since the Harvard contest and they all assume the persistency of a block agent.

Connie Mack is among the managers who has taken a liking to the Tufts player and is attempting to coax out the scouts of the Detroit, Philadelphia Nationals and the Boston club in an endeavor to get the big collegian to sign his John Hancock. The work of the scouts, however, is useless, as Leland has decided to continue his college career as a star.

Detroit has also offered a contract to Captain Stafford, while similar overtures have been made to Red Carroll, who also plays his final season this year. Both are undecided whether they will accept any of the opportunities offered them.

BRAVES OFFER TWO HOLIDAY GAMES

Tomorrow the Braves and Pirates play two games, one in the forenoon and the other after luncheon. Inasmuch as the Pirates are going pretty good at this time and especially inasmuch as Howard Wagner is playing like a newcomer, a large crowd is expected to each game. The forenoon contest will start at 10:30 and the afternoon game at 3 o'clock.

Red Sox Win in 9th, 2-1

Leonard Hero of Game

Chicago, June 16.—It pays to stick on the job until the last man is out. A conservative gambler at the start of the ninth inning yesterday would have wagered 10 to 1 the Red Sox would not win.

Yet they walked off with the pastime, 2 to 1, and thus made it almost impossible for the White Sox to displace them in the first division of Ban Johnson's personally conducted league this series.

Imagine a club passing through eight innings with no luck. Then men were thrown out at the plate, always upon close decisions. Leonard had held the hostiles to a quartet of scratches, and yet the Carrigans could not get over a run.

In the ninth four hits, a double by Walker and singles by Janvrin, Zauer and Leonard, netted two runs and victory. Mixed in was a sacrifice by Gardner.

This sort of a fighting spirit marks the Red Sox as foemen worthy of any club and a contender. With all the breaks of luck going against them, the Red Sox stuck on the job full the last round, and then by sheer pluck, obtained the job to their own satisfaction.

One of the persons who contributed largely to the final well-deserved victory was Sam Agnew. The former Brownie apparently shuffled off the game in the seventh when, with two out, he muffed Joe Jackson's easy foul. Affirming "Original Joe" singled, counting Weaver.

Not in the ninth with the tying run on and Janvrin on first, this same Agnew manufactured a base knock that assisted in producing the winning run.

Boston was outhicked in the early rounds and apparently had no chance of getting the contest, still, when the "breaks" came they came rapidly, and the whole course of the battle was turned around.

"Dutch" Leonard pitched a great game. All the Sox's supposed heavy hitters were stopped; of the five blows, two were made by New and two by Terry, whose prowess is as little be smiles just in front of the pitcher.

Reverting to home runs once more, it will be worthy of note that Ellis Walker, successor of Tris Speaker, broke off the two leagues that started the Carrigans on their merry way. Likewise he snared two long flyers which might have been hits on less able fielders.

There is only one Speaker, of course. But Walker yesterday was a more than fair substitute.

Fisher and Bush are the probable pitching picks for today.

University Heights will be the mecca of college baseball enthusiasts this afternoon when Harvard and Boston College clash in the second and final game of their series.

Last week the Boston College nine gave college circles a start by trouncing the Crimson, 5-1. This was the first defeat Harvard suffered at Soldiers Field this season and Coach Fred Mitchell's charges are out for revenge.

Bob Gill, who held the Crimson to three scattered hits in last week's battle, will be on the mound for Boston College, while Whitney will probably pitch for Harvard.

Brown Graduates Pay Tribute to Fred Tenney, '94

PROVIDENCE, June 16. — Fred Tenney, manager of the Newark (International League) club, was given a royal welcome at Melrose Park when he came on the field with his players to coach baseball the Grays.

Tenney, Brown, '94, catcher of the famous Seaton-Tenney battery, was greeted at the plate by members of his old university team who still live here and a crowd of Brown graduates.

Seaton, his old battery mate, did the honors, and presented "Old Fred" a floral horseshoe, a chest of silver and a traveling bag.

Doc Durgin, first baseman of the Newark team and a Brown graduate, '14, was remembered by his college mates, and received a basket of flowers and a traveling toilet set.

Poughkeepsie Ready for Regatta

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 16.—Everything was in readiness today for the staging of the twenty-second annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association over the Highland-Poughkeepsie course Saturday. Despite the overcast skies and chilly winds this city was gay in its holiday dress of flags and bunting. Business buildings were draped with banners, flags and bunting, and shop windows were decorated with college flags, miniature shells and photographs of previous races.

The hotels are rapidly filling up with folk from out of town and all conversations smack of boat races, shells and oarsmen.

The crews were out early and inclined to light practice runs to keep them fit for the gruelling battle for victory tomorrow.

Betting is very light. Syracuse followers are playing wagers of 2-1 against the field. Cornell and Columbia crews are calling for even money against each other and 2 to 1 against Pennsy.

BADOUD MEETS KID ALBERTS TONIGHT

New York, June 16.—Albert Badoud, the sensational European champion, means Johnny Kid Alberts in the outdoor ring at Washington Park tonight. The bout was scheduled for last night, but was postponed because of the weather. This is Badoud's last fight here, so he sails tomorrow for South America to meet Ted Kid Lewis.

HARRIS OUT OF TOURNEY

Hartford, Ct., June 16.—Today's semi-finals in the New England championship tennis tournament bring together W. S. Gooding, Simsbury, and Jerry Weber, Yale, and H. S. Stoddard, Yale, and F. W. Cole, Hartford. Champion F. B. Harris of Brattleboro, Vt., was put out by Stoddard, 1—6, 6—4, 7—5.

Two Spicy Cards of Racing at Beach Oval

With two races scheduled at the Revere cycle track tonight and tomorrow night the fans will have plenty of opportunity for enjoyment over the holiday.

The Brassard race, which was scheduled for Wednesday night, was postponed as the riders thought the track unsafe for riding owing to the heavy fog which spread its mantle over the oval. This event will be run off tonight. The four riders, George Wiley, Clarence Carman, Victor Linnart and Georges Seres, make a stellar card, and the sixty minutes of racing is bound to be chock full of excitement.

On the holiday night the regular amateur and professional open and handicap races will be followed by a special team pursuit race between "Paisey" Logan and Tim Sullivan and Ned Chandler and J. C. Rollins, "Pinky" Turville, the youthful rider from Revere, Clarence Carman, Paul Sutar and the Italian champion Columbate, meeting in a twenty-five mile motor-pace race.

Turville, though a mere youth, has ridden as a professional at the track. He is exceptionally fast and is bound to be heard from in the pace-following game.

SCRIBE EATS HIS WORDS—FORCED TO

Glendive, Mont., June 16—Charges of kidnaping are expected to be brought today against Jack Dempsey, local young man accused by George M. Brown, reporter of a local newspaper, of having assaulted him, taking him out of town in an automobile and throwing him adrift in a weakened condition.

Brown, in a recent story about the Glendive nine, criticised its management. He was carried fifteen miles out of town and compelled to eat the portions of the newspaper in which his "roast" was printed.

EVAN WILLIAMS IN FRONT IN 2:18 TROT

Framingham, June 16.—Another big crowd saw the second day's racing of the Bay State Short Ship Circuit. Evan Williams (Hartlett) won the 2:18 trot. The Worcester entry landed the first two heats, and finished third to Dorothy Gay, Gould's and Atlas Hal (Dorsey) in the final heat. Grace Stillman (Mr. Hastings) annexed the 2:35 class, trotting to cart, amateur drivers. Ned Major Byers (Crozier) took the 2:12 pace by winning the last three heats after finishing second to Ashland Reed (Dore) in the first heat.

BATES PICKS LAWRENCE.

Lewiston, Me., June 16—William F. Lawrence, '16, of Lawrence, Mass., was elected captain of the Bates College track team. He is a relay man and was winner of the quarter-mile run at the State meet last month.

RING REMARKS

Mish Murray has completed his preliminary events, as follows: Johnny Noonan vs. Billy Mack, winner to fight Jimmy Clark; Kid Lee vs. Johnny Dawson—here is bound to be a rocking little set-to; Jack Cullen and Bob Hart vs. Jimmy Gray, six rounds.

Eddie Flynn's Peabody and Lynn friends are confident the latter's pride will be front Joe Connolly, the Charlestown Bearcat, in an outand-out boxing bout in their arena at the Commercial A. C. tonight. Maybe so and maybe not—but will Flynn be content to go over. Connolly is rugged and can fight, though he is anything but a finished boxer. But he's no doggone rough and tough. It takes a mighty good second rater to whip him, and it remains to be seen if Flynn is skilled enough to put the trick.

Joe Woodman, Stan Langford's manager for, he, Stan many years, has added Barney Shuder to his string and seeks a date with any of the battlers on Mickey Walker's list of Al Morton's string preferred. The reason Woodman seeks Brown above all others to be seen he figures his charge and "Mickey" will get the money nearly if matched.

Shuder said a good Worcester in the game, but to date this Summer has been idle. Woodman is mighty smart on figures and sends word to the AMERICAN he prepared to bet $500 Shuder can trim Brown if Morton will talk business. Say 112 pounder Shuder will, if Morton says "yes" for Brown, adds Woodman.

POOR GUY!

Have pity on the baseball star when skies are dark and low
And tempests rip the firmament and wild winds rent and roar,
For then he has to spend a JIF upon a movie show.
And when he does a thing like that it hurts him to the core.

Playing chess blindfolded is nothing new in the sporting game. A lot of ball players for that way.

HWFA might be a fine title for a fat building or a sleeping car, but the wretch who wished that name on a horse is guilty of cruelty to animals.

ASK BJORNE BJORNSON; HE KNOWS.

Dear George: I know little about the game of tennis. I have never played a game. I simply want to know how many records Molla Bjurstedt. BILL BJONES.

Charley Porter hands us a new one. For years we have known that a tennis ball can hand a citizen a poke on the left eye and blacken the said eye without removing the specs. We have also known that citizens who wears the said spectacles. We have always wondered how it was possible to hand a man a black eye through an eyeglass and leave the eyeglass intact. It is a fact which neither William J. Holmes or Sherlock Bones has been able to fathom. Now, however, comes the case of Mr. Porter.

We were seated in our modest diggings when a tall gentleman asked us for a match.

We knew at once that he was a journalist.

"How," he asked, "can a man lose a sock without taking off his shoe?"

"I give it up," we replied, adding that he was trying to spring some new press agent dope on us.

"How can a man lose a sock without taking off a shoe? I give up. Tell us how to kid me, George," we replied. "This is a serious proposition. I awoke this morning with my left shoe and only one sock. WHAT HAS BECOME OF THAT LEFT SOCK?"

To the first man, woman or child who solves the mystery Mr. Porter will donate the other sock. We are too busy to handle the case. We are trying to discover why we always vote for a candidate who wears whiskers.

That South American boxing carnival has been called off. South Americans like the ball, but not that kind.

"Leave It to My Mary Ann."--- Frank Moran

By International News Service.

New York, June 16.—Not much worried by a warning by the State Athletic Commission that all the regulations have not been complied with the managers of the Jack Dillon-Frank Moran fight will meet today at Washington Park, Brooklyn, June 23, gave out statements today from both sides.

Dillon's statement said he would knock Moran out and that the fight would be a slugging match because he intended making it so.

Moran, who is board of this at Saratoga Springs, issued a counter statement. "Dillon's slugging means with my approval," he said. "It will be a slugging match, and I am working with little fellows for this bout.

I will not have to hit at the clouds as I did with Willard. Dillon will be right in front of me and my trusty "Mary Ann" will connect with his jaw, which means curtains and dreamland for the alleged "Man-Killer" and Ring-Crusher."

The warning from the Boxing Commission called attention to the fact that the club must file a copy of all contracts and that if there are any guarantees they must be noted.

HIGGINSON PULLS COMEBACK AT C. C.

With the inaugural days racing of the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Brookline Country Club a sparkling success, and that despite the arctic like afternoon, the final day's sport, on the menu for tomorrow, can be relied upon proving the hit of hits.

A. Henry Higginson, after eight years absence from the turf, sported his silks yesterday and piloted The Prophet to victory in the Challenge Cup steeplechase. He was the recipient of a veritable ovation upon returning to the judges stand.

Hibler, the heavily mount favorite won the Chamber Stakes, a 2-mile pleachase, in hollow style with Dixon Park second and Bill Dudley third. The winner was admirably ridden by T. Parrette.

Today the racing steward, and visiting horse set were to be the guests of Harry Worcester Smith at his palatial estate at Worcester.

Dayton Tells Grace of His Love in the Course of the Tramp to the Hotel

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLVII.

Copyright, 1916, Star Company.

Sylvia Ainslee did not speak again until Mr. Hendricks had carefully turned his buggy around. Then she looked at Dayton.

"Shall I send a rig back for you?" she asked.

Grace answered for him. "No—for that would mean that Mr. Dayton must sit in his wet clothes for an hour and a half longer, and he would run the risk of catching his death of cold. We'll walk."

"It does seem to be the only thing to do," he acquiesced slowly. "But think of your white shoes."

"They will clean perfectly," she informed him. Then, to Sylvia—"May I trouble you to tell my mother that I am perfectly safe, and that I will probably reach home by dark?"

"But I fear we must," the man remarked as the buggy started and they began their journey back.

"What if we don't, the girl said lightly. "I prefer experience and this rarely fine weather to an afternoon which she could not endure. For one knows that she looked very much bedraggled as she splashed along in the mud, her white dress tumbled and creased, her once white shoes already encrusted with dirt, her hair clinging in moist strands about her face and neck.

She untied the white cotton veil and took it off, folding it carefully. It was fairly new, and might yet be saved. She would not want it now, even if she was a friend without it.

But the man at her side was a very different creature from that her fancy painted. He wore the graceful figure, the ready smile, the wide, expressive eyes.

GRACE NOT TIRED

It was near the end of the last mile that he spoke out his thought. They had paused to rest for a minute and watch the glow fading out of the west, where the sun had gone down a half hour ago.

"Are you fearfully tired?" he inquired anxiously.

"Of course not," she answered. "I can't tell you," he said, "how sorry I am for all the discomfort I have put you through."

"Don't try," she advised, "for I am not sorry a bit. We've had a walk that I never should have thought of taking but for the unfortunate drive that preceded it."

Her evident sincerity gave him courage to speak the words that came surging up from his heart, but that, until now, he would have considered it presumptuous to utter.

"You're a dear little sport!" he exclaimed.

She laughed tremulously. "All my life I've wanted to be considered a sport, although I've never been able to live up to the title," she said. "Today my ambition has been gratified. Thank you for bestowing such an honor upon me!"

She laughed merrily and started to walk on. But he checked her.

"Miss Webb," he insisted, "that is not what I said. I called you a dear little sport. Won't you let me tell you how dear?"

* * * * *

Myra Webb had been anxious when the thunder shower came up, but her uneasiness was finally allayed by the news brought her by Sylvia Ainslee.

"There was room for only one of us in his rig," the girl explained frankly, "so those two silly things insisted on walking instead of waiting until I could order a carriage sent for them. They said"—spitefully—"that they might catch cold if they waited there in the wet. So they are coming on foot."

"That is wise," was Myra's only comment. "Thank you for telling me, Miss Ainslee."

A NEW EXPRESSION

Whatever may have been the mother's inner sentiments, she controlled them so effectually that her informant said no more.

Long as Grace's walk had been, Myra detected no sign of weariness or hesitation in the light step with which the girl entered the hotel after dark had fallen over the landscape.

"Aren't you tired to death?" Myra inquired solicitously.

"No, I'm all right," Grace assured her. "Only mussy and hungry. I'm sorry you've had to wait dinner for me, mother," she added, an unusual softness in her tone. "I'll run upstairs and dress as fast as I can."

Myra lingered for a moment to hear Mr. Dayton's explanations and apologies, then cut him short by telling him that she knew he was not to blame, and followed her daughter upstairs.

She found Grace seated. Watching her, she saw in the young face an expression that had never been there before, and her heart thrilled at signs of the happiness that made her child almost beautiful. But she would ask no questions. Indeed, she would show that she demanded no confidences.

"Don't bother to tell me about it now, dear little girl," she said, "after a while we will have a good long talk. It's late now—and I will wait for you downstairs."

As Myra started from the room Grace spoke again. "Mother," she said, her voice unsteady in spite of her efforts to control it, "if—if Henry—Mr. Dayton—comes downstairs before I do, wait on the veranda with him until I come down, won't you? He wants to speak to you, he said."

Lux is pure essence of soap in flake form

What LUX is

Lux is the modern form of soap for fine laundering—pure essence of soap in flakes.

Why soap for fine laundering should be in flakes

Soap should never be rubbed directly on a delicate fabric—it coarsens the fabric and gradually turns it yellow. Use Lux which dissolves instantly.

Lux is made in the form of flakes because in these tiny flakes is condensed more real cleansing value than is possible in any other form of soap.

In this way, Lux can be kept absolutely pure concentrated soap; in this form, there is no need for any air, any moisture, or any kind of "fillers," which have no cleansing value.

Lux contains more real soap than five times its weight in ordinary soaps, soap chips or soap powders.

It can't injure anything which pure water alone won't injure.

Try Lux just once

No matter what soap you use now for fine laundering, try Lux—10c at your grocer's or in department stores.

See for yourself what a remarkable difference it makes!

Think what it means to you to have at last found something which

Won't Shrink Woolens!
Won't turn silks yellow!
Won't injure even chiffons!

Simplicity Marks These Ultra Smart Summer Models

Republished by Special Arrangement with GOOD HOUSEKEEPING, the Nation's Greatest Home Magazine

From Good Housekeeping for June

AS the sun has grown hotter, hats have grown wider, until many of the smartest have a breadth of brim like that of the one above. The puffy crown is black net, and nodding black ostrich tips are tacked close against it. The transparent brim is horsehair braid.

REPRESENTATIVE of the most advanced styles of the Summer, yet simple enough to wear at any informal party is the dress above. It is French blue net over French blue silk, with pointed blue ribbons edged with silver thread for trimming. Such a frock would be just as smart of organdy and lace, or of Georgette crepe and ribbon.

THE cleverness of Premet, its French designer, has given the white taffeta frock shown here just the degree of originality which conforms to good taste. The sleeves are embroidered in violet and mauve silk, the soft draped collar is a trimming in itself, and the crisp tunic or white tulle splashes out to give the fashionable fulness at the hips.

Good Housekeeping Recipes

Good food properly cooked goes far toward insuring health and long years. As much depends on the cooking, however, as on the food itself. The following recipes have been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute, conducted by GOOD HOUSEKEEPING, and are republished here by special arrangement with that publication, the Nation's Greatest Home Magazine.

All measurements are level, standard half-pint measuring cups, tablespoons, and teaspoons being used. Sixteen level tablespoonfuls equal a half-pint. Quantities are sufficient for six people unless otherwise stated. Flour is sifted once before measuring.

Strawberries with Plain Charlotte

½ tablespoonful gelatin, ½ cupful pow'd sugar.
½ cupful milk, 1 teasp'l vanilla.
1 pint heavy cream, 1 pint stemmed strawberries

Soak the gelatin in the milk for ten minutes, then stir over hot water until it melts. Cool, and add it to the cream, which should be beaten to stiff froth, and into which has been folded the powdered sugar and vanilla. The bowl containing this mixture should be set in a second receptacle containing cracked ice or ice water. Stir the mixture continually until it begins to stiffen, heap the strawberries in a fruit dish, dust with sugar and put over the charlotte in teaspoonfuls, or use a pastry bag. Garnish with berries.

Molded Halibut

1 pound raw halibut.
1 pint soft bread crumbs.
1 cupful light cream.
¼ teaspoonful celery salt.
1 teaspoonful salt.
4 egg-whites.

Mince the halibut fine and cook the crumbs and seasonings with the cream till it makes a smooth paste. Add to the fish, fold in the egg-whites beaten stiff, pour into a buttered bread tin, set in hot water and bake three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. Serve with brown almond sauce.

France Strawberries

Wash and hull large strawberries, allowing six or eight to a person; cut fresh ripe pineapple in strips about one-quarter inch thick and one inch long, and insert in the berries to replace the hulls. Arrange individually and garnish with whipped cream which has been sweetened to taste with powdered sugar. It may be tinted pale pink with vegetable coloring if desired.

Home-Made Maraschino Cherries

Stone the desired number of cherries, then soak them for twenty-four hours in weak vinegar to make them firm. Drain, measure, and allow an equal amount of granulated sugar, mix thoroughly, and heat in a covered crock or deep earthenware dish for one hour, stirring every day. Seal in glass jars and let stand at least a month before using.

Anecdotes of the Famous

The chief of the Italian general staff, General Cadorna, has a strong objection to "showy" officers who risk their own lives and those of their men in acts of bravado which have no real military value.

"We have no use for heroes of romance," he says. When Pergino Garibaldi, who is noted for his reckless courage, sought a commission in the Italian army, after having served in the earlier part of the war as a volunteer in France, he was recommended by D'Annunzio as "one of our bravest."

"That is bad," retorted General Cadorna, tersely.

"He sings and laughs amid a hail of enemy explosives," continued D'Annunzio.

"Bad, bad," replied General Cadorna.

"At the mere sight of him his men become seized with an enthusiasm that leads them to rush joyfully to death in an intoxication of holy ardor," proceeded D'Annunzio.

"Worse and worse," responded General Cadorna.

"What qualities, then, are required?" asked D'Annunzio.

"I am of the opinion," answered General Cadorna, "that he should be taught, first of all, not to get killed himself and not to expose his men without need. An officer who is worthy of his position does not fear death, but he does not despise life. He must be cool, methodical and serious."

What Do You Think About?

All Your Thoughts Leave Their Traces on Your Face

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"As a man thinketh in his heart so he is."

Physical conditions write themselves on the face and body, and a doctor who is a clever diagnostician can almost read their meaning at sight. So, too, for mental states. The physician who has studied mental and nervous disorders recognizes certain facial characteristics that are symptoms of disease.

Who would willfully write on his face unpleasant signs of unpleasant mental condition? That is exactly what you do when you permit your mind to dwell on morbid things.

All thoughts of cruelty, of unkindness, of fear, of anger or of indecency leave their traces on the human face. This is not theory, it is fact. Tiny little marks and lines come into the face as a result of mental habit.

Who of us has not seen a drooping, tremulous mouth that told of bitter cynicism? Which of us has not observed shifty, unfocused eyes that betrayed a habit of mental evasion? These are marked conditions, but the lesser ones are there too.

The face betrays mental states. But it is the mental states themselves that are of graver importance. Think along certain lines long enough and you can come almost to exist along those lines. Mental habits are dangerous to form.

Take the case of suspicion. Suppose you let yourself get into the way of wondering what hidden meaning there is behind what people say, what my intention there is behind what they do; suppose you begin to question the sincerity of some of your friends and acquaintances—the habit grows on you, more and more your tendency to question grows into one to distrust and finally suspicion becomes part of your nature.

And once suspicion takes possession of you, you become unable to accept anybody silently and honestly, and faith and trust become almost impossible for you to know.

If you think in terms of sunshine and good cheer, you come gradually to feel in those terms. Contemplating kindness and beauty brings them home to you. Mental habits are fairly easy to form and fearfully difficult to break. All of us who are normal have a choice of controlling our own minds or letting them run away from us.

There is an old German saying that suggests this idea: "Just as you shout into the forest so the echo shall come back to you." And so you get from life fairly much what you have deposited in its bank!

Think of the world as a place which appreciates honest endeavor and which rewards merit with success and you will have a cheery willingness to endeavor and a hopeful feeling that success is yours for the taking. This attitude may never bring you ten thousand a year, but it will give you optimism that cannot fail.

Morbid melancholy is the result of nothing that sweeps on you from the outside; it is due directly to the way you feel within yourself.

What you think about conditions indicates not what you are, but what you inevitably must be. Look on life as a place where things depend on chance and where fate has been cruel to you and there everything is rather hopeless any way and where to try were vain, and naturally, since your back is to the sun and you have encased yourself in a black canopy of woe, you will never see sunlight.

It is dangerous to get into the habit of thinking morbid, unhappy thoughts. And it is perfectly possible to get into the habit of thinking cheerful, optimistic, hopeful and constructive ones.

When you think about is a matter of choice—and a choice that ought to be carefully and sanely made.

A fevered imagination can fancy itself ill. A frightened diagnosis can consider all hope lost. But a sane and cheerful optimism gives courage to fight and conquer, sees no obstacles too high to surmount or woe too desperate to be overcome.

The man who thinks in terms of success cannot imagine failure. The man who does not know when he is beaten never is finally conquered, since he holds in his heart an indomitable cheer like to that of Browning's hero:

"One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break
Never dreamed, though right were worsted,
Wrong would triumph.
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake."

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance. Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case. Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

Advice to the Lovelorn

HE IS COURTEOUS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two boy friends who are new friends of my husband also frequently come to our little apartment on Sundays and always stay to supper. One brings me candy once in a while and sometimes other things which interest us all, such as books or magazines. The other never brings anything. My girl friend thinks I do wrong in accepting anything since I am married, but my husband never objects, even is pleased. Now, which is right? Both young men are very nice, but I say that the first is just thoughtful and pleased, so likes to return a little pleasure, as he has no home to entertain us in. MARY JANE.

You are exactly right about this young man. What he is doing is in very good taste and means that he has a spirit of appreciation for the courtesies you are showing him and wants to make some return for the hospitality he receives in your home. It would be absurd to put any other interpretation on the little offering he brings, not so much to you, but as house gifts.

RETURN IT PROMPTLY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Have been going about with a young man for three years. A year ago Christmas he presented me with a diamond ring, with the strict understanding that it was only a friendship ring. We had a few words between us and I offered to return his presents, but he said what he gave me was mine.

Since then he has broken off and is engaged to another young lady, and he writes and demands the ring.

Kindly give me your opinion whether I should return the ring or not. A. S. P.

BY all means return the ring. Under the circumstances it is decidedly beneath your dignity to keep it. Of course he has no right to it, but even so your own self-respect demands that you return it at once. Don't fail to do this.

TELL HIM THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

During a two-year friendship with a young man I received a token he highly prized. I have lost it and our friendship has closed. Now he demands the token back. What would you advise me to do, as the young man is angry. He has written me intimating letters concerning same. G. R. P.

WRITE this young man a sincere and honest letter, telling him that you have lost his gift and will be very glad to replace it if he will tell you any place where you may find the duplicate of it. If he can tell you of no method of making good the loss he certainly has no ground for anger or suspicion and you need not feel badly about a situation in which you have done your best.

WOOD PRAISES PLATTSBURG 'ROOKIES'

The AMERICAN has sent Willard H. Davis to the citizens' camp at Plattsburg to tell how Boston and other New England citizens are training to help defend this nation efficiently in case of war. The preparedness parades throughout the country have shown that the nation is aroused at last to the necessity of being prepared. It is today the one big important issue in the nation. Mr. Davis will tell from day to day how the citizens are working to learn how to defend the nation and to lead others in its defence.

By WILLARD H. DAVIS,
Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Plattsburg, June 16.—Major-General Leonard A. Wood, U. S. A., commander of the Department of the East, and known as the father of the Plattsburg idea, is in camp today looking over the student soldiers who have been receiving military instruction here for the past week and a half.

He inspected the camp, reviewed the troops on the parade ground, conferred with the camp officers relative to the plans of coming camps and visited with many of his associates among the officers.

He will leave tonight to attend several college commencements throughout the East, and will return to Plattsburg in about ten days. It is his intention to stay at camp most all Summer. He intends to participate in the "hikes" and manoeuvres. His headquarters are open here, and while he is at camp all orders pertaining to the Eastern Department will be issued here.

"ROOKIES" CHEER WOOD.

He arrived shortly after noon. He was met at the train by Camp Commander Peter Murray, and Captain Halstead Dorey, aide to General Wood. He addressed the 1,400 business men soldiers drawn up after noon in the lecture field. As he stepped forward, after being introduced by Major Murray, he was given a rousing welcome.

The men waived their hats in the air and cheered him for many seconds.

He stated that 7,000 men will attend the July camp, and that the present enrollment for the entire Summer is about 13,000. He stated that he expects that next year this number will increase to 50,000.

In speaking of the parade, which he reviewed with the camp officers, he said:

The exhibition was remarkable. You have, indeed, accomplished much in the short time, considering the inclement weather. I can readily see that the work has been faithful and conscientious. It shows results, and that is what counts now.

I desire to compliment each and every one of you for the splendid showing you have made thus far.

True, the weather has been very disagreeable, but the officers here at camp tell me that you have gone ahead with your work with a splendid spirit.

I congratulate you for that spirit and sincerely hope that the sun will soon shine upon you and give you the opportunity of enjoying the pleasant side of camp life.

Of course, by this time you have all learned that soldiering is not to be treated lightly or entered into as a diversion. It is a most serious proposition.

You, too, have undoubtedly learned that you can't become a soldier over night. You should play this game as though it were a matter of life or death, and by the reports of the officers I should say that you had been playing the game in that spirit.

In a democracy, a fundamental principle is that with equality of opportunity goes equality of obligation, and that with manhood suffrage goes manhood service.

General military training means preparedness for war should it come, and it moreover makes for greater national morality and solidarity.

You never live honestly for humanity unless you are prepared to defend the rights of your own people. Remember what the centurion said when he was going to flog Paul? "Have a care what you are doing to this man. He is a Roman." What we want them to say is: "Have a care what you are going to do with this man, for he is an American."

After the men left the natural amphitheatre, General Wood held an impromptu reception with several of the men whom he met at the camp last year.

SHORT OF INSTRUCTORS.

In his talk with the newspaper men he stated that the only difficulty that Plattsburg was contending with at present was the shortage of regular army officer instructors as a result of the many shifts caused by the Mexican situation. He declared, however, that there would be no trouble in carrying out all of the original plans.

The first relief of this situation came today, when about a dozen West Pointers, just graduated, came here with the rank of second lieutenants, in their brand new uniforms to assist in the instruction work. The new officers made a decided hit with the men in camp, and proved "good fellows."

The day's work consisted, in the morning, of instruction in the mechanism of combats by companies advancing in extended lines, by squads and by platoons, and extended formation, winding up with the bayonet charge.

The afternoon was devoted to instruction at the rifle range on the Saranac, of the men in the "butts," where all the firing is done. As the men returned from the skirmishes, many wore grass fringes in the front of their hats which they had used on the firing line as cover from "the enemy." The work was mostly done in the rough country about Plattsburg, and many times the boys were obliged to cut their way through the underbrush.

Two Divorce Suits Filed.

Two divorce suits were filed in Dedham today. Mrs. A. A. Allingham of Canton accuses Andrew J. Allingham of making of gross and confirmed habits of intoxication, and William Sharstrom, Wellesley, says Charlotte Sharstrom, New York deserted him.

TELLS GROCERS HOW TO WIN NEW TRADE

Make an American plum pudding to beat the English plum pudding, was the advice given today before the last day's session of the National Wholesale Grocers' convention at the Copley-Plaza by Dr Edward E. Pratt, formerly chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington.

"Practically every foreign land has its own peculiar characteristic food products that either have been or can be placed upon the table of the American consumer," said the speaker.

"England has the reputation of the plum pudding — A single manufacturer in that country sells 250,000,000 plum puddings in this country annual[ly] since the war began. There is no reason why we American cooks cannot make plum puddings and distribute them as widely as the English manufacturers."

Dr Melvin T. Copeland of Harvard, representing the Bureau of Business Research, said:

"The building of a navy and the recruiting and training of an effective army are no more important than the organization of the grocery business in accordance with modern methods. The waste due to poor methods is enormous to the grocery retailer's detriment. The first task is to obtain exact knowledge of his costs."

Robert J. Nolden of Philadelphia said:

"There should be no objection on the part of the manufacturer to grocers in a discount basis. The question these days is 'How to get cash?' We are jealous of the fellow who does a cash business. The committee believes it is the duty to every personal to join the ranks of effective the wholesale grocery business on a buying basis of 2 per cent for cash in ten days."

HARDWARE MEN ON HARBOR OUTING

Nearly a thousand delegates, with their friends, who have been attending the seventeenth annual convention of the National Hardware Association, spent today at Pemberton, where a fish dinner was served, followed by a pilgrimage to Fort Revere.

Sports and games contributed to the enjoyment, and a number of the party made splendid records in the potato races, while the men battled baseballs after the feast of the day.

Many of the delegates will leave for the West tonight, while others intend to stay over for Bunker Hill Day.

PATRIOTISM FETE FOR SOMERVILLE

Citizens, Let Us Make This Campaign Solely an American Campaign

"SUCH a plank," said Mr. Morgenthau, when asked about the proposal of a Constitutional amendment making justices of the Supreme Court ineligible to the presidency, "will not be allowed to get into the platform. The President will never consent to it. This campaign is to be conducted on a very high plane, with no personalities."

"This," said former Solicitor-General Frederick Lehmann, expressing opposition to the same proposed plank, "is going to be an intellectual campaign conducted on the highest level we have ever seen. Any Democrat who detracts from that and who seeks to inject personalities will do a great harm to the party."

All of which sounds well, and we wish it were fact.

But, as a matter of fact, Mr. Wilson's two recognized newspaper organs in New York have both already unlimbered their mud batteries and started the campaign on the low level of petty politics.

So far, this petty politics has assumed two forms.

One is the assertion that Mr. Hughes has degraded and defiled the Supreme Court by resigning his seat on the bench to become the nominee of a great party for the presidency.

The other is an attempt to stir up race antagonism between Americans of German ancestry and Americans of other ancestry.

The first of these political littlenesses is beneath the notice of a sensible man. It is useful only in one way, as providing a gauge of intellectual capacity. If anyone you are talking to uses the fact that Mr. Hughes was taken from the Supreme Bench to be made a nominee for the presidency as a serious argument against his qualifications, it is not necessary to be rude to such a person. Simply set him down in your own mind as a feeble wit upon whom the time of a wise man is wasted.

Because it requires no argument to show a sensible mind that no court, nor any other organization on earth, can possibly be degraded or defiled by a man leaving it, and that the degradation of the Supreme Court can only come about by ADDING unfit or corrupt men to its membership. Besides, no sensible person needs to be told that the highest court in the world could only be honored by selecting from its number the Chief Magistrate of this wonderful nation of which we are citizens.

So much for that cheap and petty coinage of cheap and petty political thinking.

But in its second form of exciting race hatred among our mixed population the propaganda of the President's two personal newspaper organs in New York is as mischievous and dangerous to the republic as it is unpatriotic, unjustifiable and un-American in character.

If there is any depth of moral treason to which an American newspaper can descend that is below the moral treason of attempting to excite hatred between American citizens of different ancestry in these times of peculiar danger we cannot guess what form that other meaner moral treason can possibly assume.

The men and the newspapers that inject the antagonisms of European warfare into the domestic politics and the great and solemn task of selecting a President of the United States to guide the fortunes of the republic through these serious years right ahead of us are shamefully faithless to the obligations of our common citizenship, and most certainly do their country as much mischief and hurt as though they actually took arms and aided its enemies in war.

In the full import of the words they are morally treasonable, for they try to excite domestic hatred and division, to destroy the loyalty of naturalized citizens, to foment seditious sentiment, and make our own dear country the football of their detestable partisanship for one or the other of the powers struggling for the political and economic domination of Europe.

The men and the newspapers that engage in this American campaign for the election of an American President either as pro-Germans or anti-Germans are both alike playing an un-American part, and one is just as bad and just as treasonably regardless of the dignity and the welfare of this America of ours as is the other.

We profoundly regret and most emphatically dissent from the actions of those citizens of German ancestry who have sought to inject consideration of Germany's interest and welfare into this campaign.

And we profoundly regret and most emphatically dissent from the actions of those citizens, of whatever descent, who have sought to inject considerations of the welfare and interest of England, France or any other European power into this campaign.

The remarkable thing is that this second class, while affecting to deplore the activities of the first class, have themselves been the very ones foremost in this un-American propaganda of alien interests and domestic division.

Reprehensible as has been much of the pro-German propaganda, none of it has begun to equal in bitterness, abusiveness and persistency the pro-British and anti-German propaganda.

This propaganda of sympathy with England and hatred of Germany has passed all bounds of decency, and would be, in its steady stream of vituperation and misrepresentation, a disgrace to enemies inflamed by the natural hate of war.

Now, then, citizens, we are quite sure that the great mass of you people do not want either this pro-German or this pro-British propaganda made a part of our own national concern in this election.

PUBLIC ROSTRUM
WINSOR McCAY

This election is our own American business. Its purpose is to elect an American President to attend to the business of America. Whoever tries to persuade you that either candidate should be voted for or voted against in the interest of Germany or of England is a public enemy, and you ought to protest vigorously and determinedly against that person's un-American talk.

It makes no difference how firmly such high-minded and truly American men as Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Lehmann may determine to conduct this campaign upon a plane of high intelligence befitting a nation of free and intelligent citizens unless you men and women emphatically impress upon these pro-German and pro-British propagandists—speakers and newspapers alike—that you are weary of their alien activities and are yourselves determined to punish with public contempt and public reprimand these disturbers of peaceful domestic politics.

The issues which should be discussed and weighed in this campaign are American issues—the vitally important economic and political measures which will profoundly affect our national and private life here at home.

Far, far more important to us than the defeat or victory of Teutons or allies is the industrial and social as well as the military and naval preparation of our country for the tremendous struggles and dangers and emergencies that will CONFRONT US when Europe and Asia have settled their warfare and cast jealous and hostile eyes upon our riches and trade and colonies.

We have hugely important questions to settle in the coming election. The whole world is being made over in the furnaces and crucibles of this tremendous war, and the peoples and governments will emerge from the fire with new ideals, new ambitions, new efficiencies, new poverties, new necessities, new greeds, new political and economic and national groupings.

We must busily prepare, by individual combinations and by wise domestic legislation, to take our own part in the fierce and relentless commercial warfare—and very likely military and naval warfare—which is only a little way ahead of us and coming to meet us, or we will surely suffer commercial and, it may be, military and naval defeat.

And, citizens, how are we to take counsel together, like sensible American men and women, over these momentous AMERICAN QUESTIONS, if we let these alien sympathizers, who put Germany or England over America, waste our time and divide our counsels and excite animosities between us with their unpatriotic and un-American and ignorantly absurd and absurdly ignorant bawling over the merits and demerits of this European war?

Citizens, tell these disturbers of our domestic peace and counsel that you are weary of their clamor.

Tell them that you have an American job on your hands and that you want to be let alone in peace and quiet while you think over the best way of doing that job in the way best for America.

There must be no pro-German or pro-British issue in this pro-American campaign and election.

The Wilson newspaper or the Hughes newspaper or any public man, Democrat or Republican, who drags this mischievous issue into our domestic politics is a demagogue of the basest kind and an enemy of this country and a disgrace to the badge of citizenship which he unworthily wears.

Citizens, this country is our country, our own mighty, powerful, free and most dear America. Our own fathers laid its foundations of orderly liberty and the mortar with which they bound together its walls was the blood drawn from their own veins.

The man who does not put the welfare of this America of ours so far above the welfare of any other nation on earth that he can see nothing but America first and last and all the time is a poor citizen, and his patriotism is rotten to the core.

Citizens, let us put an end to this kind of thing right now, right in the beginning of this campaign.

The first time a demagogue mounts the stump to bawl in your ears the cause of Germany or the cause of England hoot him off the stump!

Away with him! Tell him to talk American interests or to keep his pestilent tongue to himself.

Make these propagandists of alien interests and of domestic hatred and divisions feel the weight of your displeasure and your disapproval so effectively that they will cease their treasonable efforts to distract your counsels and to bring trouble upon our country in order to give aid and comfort to either one or the other of the warring governments across the sea.

Be Americans, citizens, and make this an American campaign over American issues in the interests and for the sole welfare of America.

Let Germany fight her own fight.

Let England fight her own fight.

As for us, we have but one duty and should have but one desire, and that is to attend to our own business, and to put our dear country in a befitting and powerfully efficient condition of industrial and commercial, social and educational, military and naval preparedness for any and all emergencies of the future.

That is the issue, and the sole issue, that should have any hearing in this domestic campaign.

AMERICA, OUR OWN AMERICA!—FIRST, LAST AND ALWAYS, AMERICA!

Say that over again, citizens—say it over again, all of you, all together!

And mean it when you say it!
